THIS MODERN WORLD

by TOM TOMORROW

Cat in the Hat, The Lorax, Horton Hears a Who, and Green Eggs and Ham. I'm as serious as an albino white whale on steroids. Dr. Seuss is the guy who inspired such greats as Sesame Street, Shel Silverstein, Stephen King, and a host of others. So, I'm sorry Steinbeck, Kesey, Salinger, Lee, Lewis. I read your best, your second-best, etc., and I agree with Ventura, you don't suck, but you just aren't eternal enough. In addition (and it's more difficult to discern this part while living in a red state), what author looks to garner forever-favor when he/she writes nowadays? We writers simply endeavor to position ourselves to receive verbiage from the muse, and then type it out as verbatim as possible. Therefore, those ghosts who are now pissed off by this letter should return to R.I.P. In most cases, it's merely the luck of the draw, or the hop of the Calaveras County frog, which determines the victor. That, and perspiration (apologies to Thomas Edison). Thanks for your column, Michael!

TRAVESTY THAT PUBLIC NOT INFORMED

Dear Editor,

It is truly a travesty that the fake abortion clinics are not required to notify the public exactly what they are on their signage ["Judge on Pregnancy 'Clinics': Signage Ordinance 'Vague,'" News, July 11]. The fact that they hide behind euphemisms should send up a red flag for everyone.

Obviously, they want to lure females with unwanted pregnancies in so they can bombard them with a religious viewpoint disguised as medical advice. If they're proud of what they do, then why aren't they proud enough to put that information on the front door?

Headlines

- City budget work resumes today, July 31, with a City Council work session (Town Lake Center Assembly Room, 9:30am), as Council enters the fall stretch. Next week, Thursday, Aug. 7, regular meetings resume with a full agenda (see "Council: Welcome Back – to Budget Season," p.14).
- Meanwhile, candidates accumulate to succeed the current Council: As of Wednesday, no fewer than 71 have expressed an official interest in either the mayor's seat or one of the 10 new district seats. Follow Newsdesk online or see the Elections page at austinchronicle.com/elections.
- Wade Atwood, the man accused of hitting and killing @ATXHippers handler Kelly Noel in May, was indicted Tuesday on a misdemeanor charge of driving while intoxicated. The grand jury reportedly considered charging Atwood, 40, with intoxication manslaughter but ultimately declined to do so. Atwood was arrested and charged with DWI after registering a blood alcohol level of .102 shortly after his vehicle collided with Noel. A court hearing is currently set for Aug. 26.
- The city of Austin and the Barton Springs/Edwards Aquifer Conservation District have expressed an official lack of confidence in the Texas Dept. of Transportation's environmental impact statement on State Highway 45, which effectively greenlights the project. The city has asked the agency to withdraw the statement and BSEACD officials have questioned whether the study is complete.
- Admiral William McRaven – the man who led the operation to kill Osama Bin Laden – has been named as the sole finalist to become the UT System chancellor. McRaven, who has faced international controversy over the military's increased use of special ops forces outside of combat zones, will replace Francisco Cigarroa.
- UT Football coach Charlie Strong continues to clean house at Red McCombs stadium, with two players suspended over a sexual assault allegation, and six more kicked off the team for NCAA infractions. The big questions now: How will the boosters react, and why didn't Mack Brown take these kinds of steps when he was in charge?
- Populist crowds are gathering in protest around this week's American Legislative Exchange Council annual meeting in Dallas, July 29-Aug. 1. Under the theme of "Don't Mess with Texas," various activist groups will be holding rallies and protests near the Hilton Anatole. For more info, see Facebook: Don't Mess With Texas, ALEC.
- Another bad week for conservative gadfly Michael Quinn Sullivan. Last week, he was fined $10,000 for failing to register as a state lobbyist: The 7th District Court of Appeals has reversed the dismissal of a libel lawsuit against GOP attack publication AgendaWise, which he founded.
- Court time for Ken Paxton? Texans for Public Justice has filed a felony criminal complaint against the GOP nominee for Attorney General, alleging he failed to register as an investment adviser. If indicted, he could be removed from the November ballot.

Questions for Candidates

IF YOU'RE NOT RUNNING, YOUR NEIGHBOR IS

A couple of months ago, I was exchanging notes with another observer of Austin politics, and he asked what I thought was the "over/under" number on City Council candidates. He suggested we'd break 60, and I – naïf that I was – said that sounded a little high.

Well, Tuesday morning, with the campaign treasurer filing of yet another candidate in District 3, we hit 71. (District 3 currently has 10 candidates, even after one withdrawal.) The total accounting includes a couple of defections – announced withdrawals in the last two weeks – and now seven mayoral candidates. So much for my prognostications.

By the time you read this, a few more names might be on the list. Not all of these folks are "serious" – i.e., seriously doing the difficult work of campaigning – and I suspect at least a few entered on impulse. At this writing, only 16 candidates have filed ballot applications – the next step in the process – but there can be financial and tactical reasons to delay that filing, so we'll not have another full reckoning until Aug. 18, when folks have to put up or shut up. But even if we don't break 50 or 60 in that round (and I better not guess), there has been an extraordinary outpouring of citizen engagement in the process, and an early vindication of those who said single-member districts should expand public interest in local government. Now let's hope it has a similar effect on voting.

In several if not most of the districts, and possibly for mayor, it will almost certainly mean run-offs, in December, not the friendliest time for electioneering. Campaigns will be exhausted, and candidates will be competing for attention with the holidays, shopping, traveling, visiting relatives. That particular collision is unlikely to happen again – future Council tenures will be staggered, and this will be the last "historic first." But let's also work to encourage more than a few voters make the effort to return to the polls.

We All Have 'Issues'

Early on, as we were doing our initial reporting, it was difficult to make many distinctions among the candidates, and only recently are the campaigners beginning to draw them. The "issues" – that vague and slippery word – sounded extremely similar. Everyone was in favor of "affordability"; all declared that "traffic" is bad; everyone wanted to "conserve water and preserve natural resources"; and of course, no one forgot "public safety."

As the weeks have moved on, a few patterns have become discernible. For some candidates – mostly in eastern districts – "affordability" more specifically means more affordable housing, finding ways to keep rising housing costs from driving working people into the suburbs. (Last week, I even heard the words “rent control” – and then the candidate quickly acknowledged he had just learned rent control is illegal in Texas.) Further west, “affordability” increasingly means only one thing: cutting property taxes. (I wrote on that subject last week, so I’ll just note here the growing economic tension between homeowners and renters.)

Addressing traffic problems, to some candidates, means investing in multimodal transportation systems, including (at least in theory) rail and bus. To others (and there’s a less sharp east-west distinction on this question), it means building roads, roads, and only roads – as though the last two decades of local debate on this issue had never happened.

Similar divisions occur on environmental matters (save water and energy, but don’t raise prices) and public safety (we need more cops, but not more spending).

A Few Open Questions

I haven’t singled out – yet – any particular candidates, because I’m identifying larger themes here and it’s still relatively early; most of the campaigns are only now beginning to get going or getting very public. But it’s worth raising some questions now for voters listening to these campaigns as they develop.

For example:

- Demanding “affordability” without defining it, or explaining how Council and the city should work toward same, is hardly more useful than repeating, “The rent is too damn high.”
- If rail is an expensive “boondoggle” and “All We Need Is Roads” – do you intend to build the roads for free, and where do you propose to put them, in a built-out city?
- If we require “hundreds” more police officers, no matter what the cost – a similar question: How do you propose to pay for them, while simultaneously cutting property taxes, which are too damn high?
- And so on: If you object to central city development, as disrupting historical neighborhoods and eliminating single-family residences, and also denounce sprawl development as environmentally destructive (and amplifying traffic congestion) – where do you propose that people moving to Austin in great numbers (as they have always done, for more than 100 years) should live, and at what cost?

I don’t claim to have easy answers to these questions, or to many more that will be facing those 71 (or more) candidates – and more importantly, facing the 11 council members who will ascend the new (larger) dais in January. Indeed, I’m simply pointing out that the answers aren’t easy – as I suspect many fledgling candidates, who entered declaring variations of “Throw the bums out,” are now personally learning on the campaign trail. And if they aren’t finding that out ... they probably shouldn’t be candidates at all. ■

A Double Whammy for CodeNEXT

A VOTE OF NO CONFIDENCE AND AN ETHICS COMPLAINT HIT THE LAND REWRITE PROCESS

The rewrite of the city’s Land Development Code is slogging along this summer, much the way it has since the “CodeNEXT” process eased into gear last year.

Maybe “eased” isn’t an apt description, because there is nothing seamless about revising a land-use code that will impact every single neighborhood across the city. As such, a good many neighborhood associations and their umbrella group Austin Neighborhoods Council have not been terribly trusting of how the process is playing out. Their skepticism hasn’t wavered since City Council adopted the Imagine Austin comprehensive plan in 2012. Rewriting the land code is a top priority of the Imagine Austin plan, so there’s no turning back; but there are plenty of distractions to slow it down.

Last week, CodeNEXT was dealt not one but two ego-bruising blows. On Tuesday, July 22, the first major neighborhood plan to come forward under Imagine Austin garnered a “no recommendation” from the Planning Commission – meaning it heads to Council for approval on somewhat awkward footing. (The PC vote was 5-0, with four members absent.) The inaugural neighborhood plan also carries mixed reviews from residents in the affected planning areas bounded north and south by Ben White Boulevard and William Cannon Drive, and east and west by South First Street and Westgate Boulevard – the next development frontier south of the 78704 zip code. To staff’s credit, the plan introduced to commissioners last week is an enormous improvement over the version rolled out for residents earlier this year. That one essentially amounted to an infill free-for-all, and residents who had been participating in the process felt they had been duped. A Planning Commission subcommittee had to run interference; neighbors and staff went back to the drawing board and worked up a compromise plan that created subdistricts, with supportive residents in those subdistricts, which allow for “small lot amnesty” and other work-around infill tools. Still, commissioners weren’t completely sold on the plan, and it failed to muster an endorsement.

Two days after the PC meeting, ANC President Mary Ingle fired the second shot with an ethics violation complaint against a member of the city’s Land Development Code Advisory Committee, which is assisting in the rewrite process. Ingle, who stressed she was bringing the complaint individually and not as an ANC rep, alleges that committee member Melissa Neslund is actually an unregistered lobbyist who represents development clients before Council and various boards and commissions.

Ingle and her pro bono attorney, Fred Lewis, point to backup materials on the city’s website that list Neslund’s name as the agent representative for certain clients, but Ingle acknowledges that alone doesn’t necessarily require that Neslund register as a lobbyist. The city lobby law defines lobbying as “the solicitation of a city official, by private interview, postal, or telephonic communications, or any other means other than public expression at a [public meeting].”

That language, Ingle says, needs to be tightened to ensure that people who represent others for money don’t have undue influence over council members and city staff.

For Neslund, Ingle’s claims are fighting words. “I’m kind of an easy target in the sense that my name is on Council agendas, Planning Commission agendas ... and it’s easy to pull that backup [from the city website]. But for them to make the assumption that just because my name is on an agenda and I’m processing an application that I’m a lobbyist is just, in my opinion, absurd and unfounded.” In fact, she continued, a deeper search would reveal that some 90% of other people listed on city agendas and planning documents are also not registered as lobbyists. “Not every project requires a lobbyist,” said Neslund, an urban planner for Bury + Partners engineering firm.

NO LOBBYISTS HERE

Keeping lobbyists off the committee was at the heart of its formation in early 2013. It was a hot topic at the time because Council Member Bill Spelman had hoped to reverse that provision and appoint a lobbyist to the committee. He reluctantly withdrew his proposal after drawing the ire of fellow Council members and community members. It also happens that Neslund is Spelman’s appointee on the committee.

Ingle is not likely to stop with Neslund. Nearly every code advisory committee member could be regarded as a “special interest” member, but in Ingle’s view the committee is weighted in favor of real estate and business interests. Moreover, she added, the committee is not subject to the same rules and regulations of other boards and commissioners. “I find that problematic,” she said. And, even though the committee plays a high-profile role in a code rewrite process, there are no video recordings of the committee meetings. Rather, they are audio recorded, and that makes it difficult to follow along. That, too, is troublesome.

The complaint is not a personal attack on Neslund, Ingle said (although Neslund would argue with that), but rather a signal that the people involved in the land development rewrite process do not have neighborhoods’ best interest at heart. She says that’s evidenced by what’s already being done outside of the rewrite process.

“We have rubber-stamped some bad processes that the city promotes, and the business interests are always at the top,” Ingle says. “And if we’re going to change the code, it’s not just the business interests, it’s also the people who live here who are affected by those decisions.” ■

Council on Transportation: Pondering the Bond

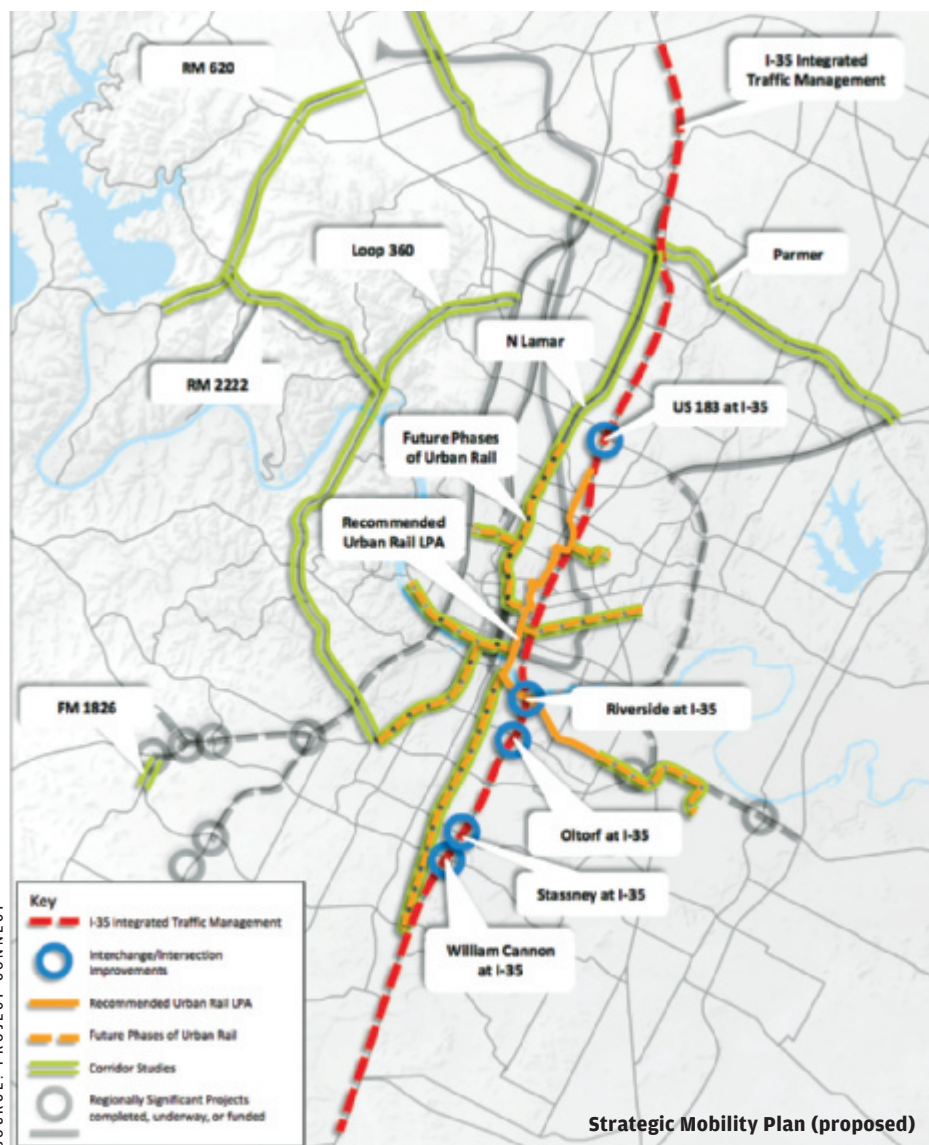

City Council returns from its summer break this week – although not straight to its usual digs in the City Hall meeting room, which is undergoing renovations in preparation for next year’s 11-member Council. Among the tasks for the next formal meeting (Aug. 7 at the Commissioners Court, 700 Lavaca), Council is expected to decide whether to place a $1 billion bond proposal on the Nov. 4 ballot, in support of the Strategic Mobility Plan – having already unanimously endorsed the plan itself at its last meeting on June 26.

As currently proposed, $600 million of the bonds, if endorsed by the voters, would fund urban rail (aka “Project Connect”), and cover a little less than half the rail project, estimated at $1.38 billion in total. If the voters approve, the city would apply for matching funds from the Federal Transportation Administration – the planners believe the project should succeed, but the local bond issuance would finally be dependent on FTA support – which could take several years for approval. Additionally, the bond package would include $400 million for road improvements. To prepare for a November vote, Council approval of the precise package and the specific ballot language needs to be ready by mid-August – hence the Aug. 7 deliberation.

The rail project, as proposed by the Project Connect team and recommended by the Central Corridor Advisory Group and then endorsed by Council and the Capital Metro board, consists of a 9.5-mile urban rail route from Grove Boulevard on East Riverside, across a new bridge over Lady Bird Lake, up Trinity Street in Downtown, through the UT campus on San Jacinto, following Red River to the Hancock Center, and taking a tunnel at Hancock before following Airport Boulevard to ACC Highland. (See the plan details in “Three Project Options,” June 13.)

The remaining $400 million of the bond package would target a variety of road projects, mostly along I-35, but also elsewhere in the city. While “the Council retains the final authority to put anything on the ballot,” Council Member Mike Martinez told the Chronicle, “The platform that we will be working from is the Strategic Mobility Plan.” Here’s a summary of the major road projects included in the plan:

- $120 million: Downtown access roadway and Riverside exchange, reconstructing Riverside interchange overpass and improving I-35 ramp access at Riverside Drive.
- $90 million: Oltorf, Stassney, and William Cannon overpass and interchange replacements.
- $81.5 million: SH 71, “direct connectors” to the airport for automobiles, and “track bed, structures, and drainage necessary for a future urban rail extension.”
- $34 million: The U.S. 183/Riverside interchange, constructing “a new grade-separated overpass and interchange,” also in order to remove obstacles to expanding rail to the airport.
- $30 million: The Regional Transportation Management and I-35 Integrated Corridor Management, including, among other things, “a new regional transportation management center, with improved and expanded technologies” aimed at improving the city’s ability to manage the entire regional transportation system and improve traffic flow.
- $44.5 million: Regional Safety and Mobility, Corridor Development and preliminary engineering (including Project Connect next corridor studies), funding corridor studies on “key regional roadways that experience congestion, traffic safety and have multimodal mobility needs,” including Loop 360, RM 620, RM 1826, RM 2222, Parmer Lane, and Lamar Boulevard.

Leading up to this decision over the past year, there has been plenty of debate concerning the overall proposals, with some residents passionately fighting the plan (see “Dissenting Voices,” June 13), and others preferring either rail or road improvements. Officials believe that bundling rail together with road projects will garner broader public support.

Council: Welcome Back – to Budget Season

City Council gets back to public business this week and next, in temporary venues: Today’s budget work session (July 31, 9:30am) is at Town Lake Center Assembly Room, 721 Barton Springs Rd., and regular meetings resume next week, Thursday, Aug. 7, at the Travis County Commissioners Court, 700 Lavaca. The road show is a consequence of renovations to City Hall and the Council meeting room, in preparation for next year’s 11-member Council.

To this point, most of the budget discussions have been preliminary, based on preliminary (spring) numbers. Council will hear updated projections from the budget officers, and start to get into the details on actual spending, and at least a preliminary property tax rate (not set until September, after public hearings). And there will likely be discussions of big-ticket items like Onion Creek floodplain buyouts, and the possibility and cost of a property tax homestead exemption (Item 3 on the work session agenda). The latter is already being tossed around on the 10-1 campaign trail as though it’s just a matter of political will (sidelong lobbying from County Commissioners has taken a similar tack). One hears that it would annually cost “only” $36 million or so – in other words, more than the entire Library operating budget ($32 million), or over twice Municipal Courts ($15 million), or 60% of Parks ($60 million).

Arithmetic is hard.

Council will have plenty more to do next week, when some of the hot-button items already posted include:

- Moving $30 million from Austin Energy’s operating funds to its reserve funds, which have been shrinking of late.
- Funding the proposed Resource Recovery Department’s plan for a recycling/remanufacturing business hub near ABIA ($1 million to match $1 million from the feds).
- Considering possible amendments to the boards and commissions structure, partly for efficiency and partly in anticipation of the 10-1 Council (there’s an evening public hearing; the decision is likely to take more than one meeting); see “Boards & Commissions Mix-and-Match,” p.17).
- And in that context, formal authorization of the Nov. 4 municipal election for Council, and – in theory at least – of the transportation bond ballot language (also with potential for more than one meeting; see more above).

There are also several water/conservation-related proposals sponsored independently by Council Members Kathie Tovo and Chris Riley (with District 9 campaign season underway, their names don’t often show up jointly). And Tovo has a proposal apparently aimed at the burgeoning neighborhood disputes over annoying workout noise coming from outside nearby gyms. Yo, hotshots, stifle it!

On a more emergency note, CM Laura Morrison wants staff to consider ways the city might support current efforts to help “unaccompanied minor refugees from Central America.” (That’s buzzing at Commissioners Court as well.)

THE ROAD TO 10-1: 100’S A CROWD

A couple of weeks ago (“The Road to 10-1: Now We Begin,” July 18), we slightly exaggerated the numbers of wannabe Councilpersons at “six dozen” – on Wednesday, the total count hit 71, including seven mayoral candidates.

As of Wednesday afternoon, only 16 had filed formal ballot applications, but that will likely become a flood by the Aug. 18 deadline. The lesson? Don’t bet the under.

And follow the coverage at austinchronicle.com/elections.

– Michael King

The combination seems to be paying off. On June 26, following Council's approval, the Greater Austin Chamber of Commerce's board of directors voted to endorse the Strategic Mobility Plan. Chamber Senior Vice President Jeremy Martin called the addition of road improvements "very important, because the number one thing we hear from Chamber members is that we need to improve traffic congestion, and the Chamber has long supported a multimodal approach to improving regional mobility. ... It's important that we pursue mobility improvements in a systemic fashion. There's no one single project that will fix traffic, and the improvements are needed citywide." Referring indirectly to the length of time required for the rail project, Martin added, "Presenting improvements that everyone can see in their daily lives is very important."

Jeb Boyt, chair of the Alliance for Public Transportation and a District 7 Council candidate, noted, "Look, we want it to pass. These things pass much better when they're bundled together. The experience we've had in working on these transit bond elections has clearly shown that that's the way it goes."

Regarding the shape of the overall proposal, Martinez said, "There certainly could be some tweaks and amendments to the plan, or there could be things that are in the plan that aren't put onto the bond package because there are other options for funding sources for those projects." But he emphasized that, "Yes, the Strategic Mobility Plan was unanimously adopted by the Council [in June], so it is the foundation of what we believe are the priorities as it relates to road projects moving forward."

Martinez said they've had sessions with legal counsel dealing with the specific ballot language. While the official language is still undecided, Martinez said the exact wording would likely "preclude the City Council from spending any funds on urban rail until we've received a federal match from the federal government on the project."

- Mac McCann

The Strategic Mobility Plan, as endorsed by City Council, is posted with this story online. We'll have more on the proposed November bond package in next week's issue, available on the morning of the Council meeting, Thursday, Aug. 7.

Another Hotel Checks In on Congress Avenue

JOHN ANDERSON

Developers plan to demolish the building at 619 Congress (l) to build a 32-story hotel; owners of the Hideout next door fear the demolition and construction will harm the building and their business.

With few options left for opponents to secure concessions from a developer, a proposal for a new Downtown hotel heads to City Council Aug. 7 for approval of a zoning change. Plans call for rezoning 619 Congress, which houses Wholly Cow Burgers, and demolishing the circa-1850 building to accommodate a 32-story boutique hotel on the property and an adjoining surface lot, home of the Kebabalicious food truck. The hotel will be called Aloft & Element Austin Downtown.

The proposal has won the recommendations of several city commissions that reviewed the plans. While lauding the hotel's design concept (with the exception of a windowless south-facing fire wall), the commissions have also encouraged the developers – Conventus Corporation and Finley Company, along with their attorney Richard Suttle – to continue working with their next-door neighbors at the historic 617 Congress, home of the Hideout Theatre and Coffeehouse. Both the Hideout and the building's owner fear that the demolition and subsequent construction will harm the building's structure and damage the Hideout's business operations.

The conflict has forced the Hideout's improv comedy community to take a stance opposing the development – it's not a role they particularly enjoy, but they're trained improvisors, so their testimony before the Planning Commission earlier this month was both compelling and entertaining.

"If they could just plop a hotel down next to us with no construction we would be 100% behind it," Hideout co-owner Jessica Arjet told the commission. She said the Hideout had asked the developers to provide a structural engineer to assess the potential impact demolition and construction would have on their building, especially a wall that the two buildings share.

Suttle told planning commissioners that his clients would repair any damage that may occur to the wall, as per a "party wall agreement" between the property owners.

"He's very nice saying that if the wall falls down they will fix it," Arjet said, "but we have a business that runs, and we want our business to run. If the wall falls down, I don't know how long it will take to fix it, and our business will probably go away," she said.

Jeff Howard, representing the owners of the 617 Congress property, put forth several arguments against the development, but none of them stuck. He noted that the hotel is planned for one of the last historic blocks on Congress Avenue that has largely gone undeveloped, save for some building facade changes over the years.

Under the proposed zoning, hotel developers would obtain a setback change from 60 feet to 40 feet, to allow for the added height. There are no plans for on-site parking (as permitted under new Downtown rules), and ADA parking spaces will be located off-site. Developers still need to obtain approval for a reduction in the number of required loading docks, from two to one.

Boards & Commissions Mix-and-Match

City is rethinking how boards and commissions operate.

The city of Austin currently lays claim to more than 60 different boards and commissions, ranging from the Arts Commission to the Airport Boulevard Advisory Group to the Zero Waste Advisory Commission to the Mechanical, Plumbing, and Solar Board. Sixty, says the official consensus, is simply too many: Each costs money to run and requires seven (soon to be 11) appointed figureheads – volunteers, that is – to maintain.

The coming transformation from a seven-member City Council to 11 members means changes are ahead, and the city wants to rethink the way those boards and commissions operate. Thus, a task force met for the first six months of 2014, charged with recommending a transition plan and issuing ways to improve the way citizens participate in city government.

In May, 15 task force members, headed by Austin Area Comprehensive HIV Planning Council Chair Victor Martinez, proposed a series of recommendations, ranging from eliminating certain boards whose charge has expired (the Comprehensive Plan Citizens Advisory Task Force and Lake Austin Task Force), creating and reassigning a handful (including the Joint Cultural Committee, which would combine membership from nine different existing committees) and consolidating a series of others. (A full list of recommendations is available at www.austintexas.gov/content/boards-and-commissions-transition-taskforce.)

Martinez reported a great deal of dissension when the recommendations were made public, with each commission slated for consolidation or removal (save for the Urban Forestry Board, set to be combined into an 11-member Environmental Commission) objecting to the plan.

Chief among the dissenters have been members of the Downtown Austin Community Court Advisory Committee and the Public Safety Commission, two groups recommended to consolidate into the Emergency Response Services Commission. But members of both commissions responded that the two have little in common.

“The clients of the Community Court are people who get a Quality of Life or Class-C misdemeanor,” said Marshall Jones, chair of the CCAC, which advises the Downtown Austin Community Court on policy and operational issues. “But the majority of our clients, other than your knuckleheads who get public intoxication citations when they come Downtown, are the homeless. To put those people in something that would merge with Public Safety would send the wrong message. Our homeless population is not a violent or aggressive population, and it's not a public safety threat. It's more of a humanitarian or health threat.” Jones recommends – if the CCAC must go anywhere – folding it into the Austin/Travis County Health & Human Services Department.

Meanwhile, PSC chairman Kim Rossmo, a retired police officer and criminology expert who now teaches at Texas State University, argues the reasons extend beyond the specifics laid out by Jones and into issues of governmental theory. “The whole principle of government is to separate certain responsibilities,” said Rossmo. “Combining law enforcement and the judicial process is a big no-no, and I don't think they thought that through or consulted any lawyers. The whole judicial process needs to be kept separate from the enforcement process. It's a fundamental part of how we do governments in the United States – in a democracy. It was a bad idea to start with.”

Council plans to hold a public hearing on the task force's recommendations at its meeting Thursday, Aug. 7. After final approval, any changes would take effect when the new 11-member Council takes office Jan. 1.

Antonio Buehler

Buehler Lawsuit Victory

Peaceful Streets Project founder Antonio Buehler jumped a big hurdle in his federal lawsuit filed against the Austin Police Department last week, when a U.S. magistrate judge denied motions to dismiss the case, ruling a citizen's right to record police officers in the line of duty was well established at the time of Buehler's first arrest, and that Officers Patrick Oborski and Robert Snider, the two who arrested Buehler on Jan. 1, 2012, are not immunized against allegations that they arrested the local activist without probable cause.

In a detailed, 36-page opinion issued last Thursday, Judge Mark Lane ruled in favor of Buehler on all motions save the two addressing claims that Oborski and Snider used excessive force against Buehler and a freestanding claim of malicious prosecution. Lane allowed Buehler's claims that the offending officers violated his First Amendment rights, arrested him without reason, and unlawfully searched his person and seized his camera. Lane also concluded that the city's failure to establish a policy, failure to train, and failure to supervise officers on relevant protocols and procedures also should be considered moving forward. All charges stem from the controversial Jan. 1, 2012, arrest of Buehler, in which he was apprehended for videotaping a woman being investigated for a potential DUI at a Downtown convenience store, as well as separate incidents in August and September of 2012, when Buehler was again arrested while filming officers in action.

In a thank-you note to his supporters Monday morning, Buehler wrote that he still plans to go to trial "to expose not only Patrick Oborski and Robert Snider for the crimes they committed on Jan. 1, 2012, but also the corrupt actions of Adam Johnson and Justin Berry (involved in the subsequent arrests), as well as the cover-up by the Austin Police Department," though the city will have time to make an appeal to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. (Calls to the city attorney's office about a potential appeal had not been returned at press time.)

On Monday, Buehler's attorney Daphne Silverman told the Chronicle that history suggests an appeal is quite likely. "I welcome it," she added. "If they appeal to the 5th Circuit, then we get a chance to make sure that Judge Lane's detailed, thorough researching of the issue is presented to the 5th Circuit in that fashion, and that the 5th Circuit either blesses it or takes it to the Supreme Court. I'd like to see the 5th Circuit look at it and am optimistic that the 5th Circuit would agree with him."

HB 2 Back in Court

The second legal battle to halt House Bill 2 begins Monday in U.S. District Judge Lee Yeakel's Austin courtroom. And this time, plaintiffs say they've got an even stronger case.

Texas' four-part abortion law, passed in mid-2013 and effective since last November, bans abortion after 20 weeks of pregnancy, forces patients to follow outdated methods when undergoing pharmaceutical abortions, and requires physicians to obtain admitting privileges at a hospital within 30 miles of where any procedure is performed. To date, the restrictions have wiped out half of the state's abortion-care clinics and increased the number of women who must travel hundreds of miles for services. The final provision, set to take effect Sept. 1, mandates that clinics spend up to $3 million to comply with the same building standards as ambulatory surgical centers, another medically unjustified attempt to eliminate abortion services. Reproductive health leaders estimate that as few as six abortion clinics will remain open to serve the entire state if the law is enacted.

Last September, more than a dozen abortion clinics mounted a legal challenge to stop the hospital admitting privileges and pharmaceutical abortion restrictions. Yeakel ruled the first part unconstitutional, but the state appealed, sending the case to a three-judge panel on the conservative 5th Circuit Court of Appeals, which granted the state's wishes. Providers have asked the full court to rehear the case and now await a response.

However, the clinics also filed a second suit in April to address the ASC requirement, and challenged the admitting-privileges rule for two clinics in underserved communities – the Whole Woman's Health clinic of McAllen and Reproductive Services of El Paso. Plaintiffs say the law is medically unjustified, places an undue burden on women (especially low-income, rural residents), and exposes them to increased health risks. Representing Texas providers in both cases, the Center for Reproductive Rights tells the Chronicle that the new lawsuit has evidence on its side – while the 5th Circuit previously cast doubt on their dire projections, plaintiffs now possess devastating proof that HB 2 has severely disrupted the health care network. In other words, HB 2's impact is no longer speculative; it's very, very real.

Last Call for DWIs at AFD?

AFD's Mark Madison was suspended indefinitely for an alleged DWI.

The surprise surrounding the recent indefinite suspension of alleged drunk-driving firefighter Mark Madison wasn't the revelation that some department staff are drinking and joyriding, but rather that it took Austin Fire Department Chief Rhoda Mae Kerr so long to drop the hammer.

On July 11, Madison, a 29-year AFD veteran who (according to The Texas Tribune) receives the highest salary of any AFD firefighter, was "suspended indefinitely" (i.e., terminated, under civil service) after crashing his car in North Austin the evening of May 10. Police responding to the scene smelled alcohol on Madison's breath, and reported that he'd stumbled, mumbled, and nearly fallen down. He told authorities he'd consumed "a few" drinks that evening. In a May 30 interview with members of the Professional Standards Office, Madison admitted to actually having between 10 and 12 drinks.

Madison is the sixth firefighter suspended for a DWI since January of 2013, but the first to incur a penalty lasting longer than 90 days. And even that figure's somewhat of an outlier; the recipient of the 90-day suspension, firefighter James Doyle, was facing his third DWI charge since 2006 when Kerr handed down her decision in January 2013. Doyle agreed to alcohol counseling, randomized testing, and a one-year probation period, as well as assuming the understanding that another violation would result in an indefinite suspension.

Otherwise, Kerr has mostly issued a series of suspensions stretching between 10 and 15 days, despite admissions that some of the suspended, including firefighters Jason Bryant (suspended for 10 days in August) and Michael Nimt (15 days in May) were driving after consuming upwards of 10 alcoholic beverages in a sitting.

Madison's suspension is the second DWI-related sanction handed down to members of the AFD since Kerr's November 2013 memorandum informing her staff that "prior efforts, including temporary suspensions of 10 days, were not having their intended and desired effects, to wit, to curtail alcohol abuse by Department Personnel, particularly driving while intoxicated." In the memo – apparently distributed by Kerr because 38% of the AFD suspensions mandated between Feb. 1, 2009, and Oct. 4, 2013, had been DWI-related – Kerr went on to explain that "future first-time 'driving while intoxicated' violations would result in a disciplinary action, up to and including indefinite suspension." Madison reportedly acknowledged receipt of this memorandum – but still decided to drive drunk.

Kerr's explanation makes no mention of the 60-day suspension levied on firefighter Randall Black – who in February was stopped for speeding on I-35 and subsequently arrested for DWI – though in her initial memorandum sent out to the department, Kerr wrote that "every alcohol related discipline case involving sworn and non-sworn will be judged on its own merits. 'I will decide the appropriate disciplinary action, which may include days off up to and including the indefinite suspension/termination of the employee.'"

How exactly Chief Kerr delineated between what constitutes 60 days and what an indefinite suspension remains unclear, though a comparison of the two memos suggests that Madison – who could barely stand, and had crashed his car so hard into a guard rail that he broke his front right axle – was significantly more blitzed than Black, whose rap sheet in this instance entails little more than "a strong odor of an alcoholic beverage" on his breath. An AFD public information manager declined to elaborate; meanwhile, Austin Firefighters Association President Bob Nicks told KLBJ-AM that Kerr's "tactic" is "very heavy-handed."

Kerr's actions target what appears to be a fairly widespread AFD problem, and they also follow an apparent crackdown by Austin Police Department Chief Art Acevedo. In early April, Acevedo distributed a dramatic video to departmental personnel (copying local media) announcing a new, zero-tolerance policy against drunk-driving police officers. First-time offenders won't just receive temporary suspensions anymore, Acevedo asserted. Each suspected offender stands to be fired, whether or not they're found guilty in a court of law.

"If our investigation shows through an abundance of evidence that someone at our department, whether they're sworn or unsworn, committed a violation of DWI, we're not going to tolerate it," he clarified at the time. He has not had to fire any officers for that offense since. – Chase Hoffberger

Wanted for Ballot: AISD Candidates

Five seats, two candidates. Filing for the Austin Independent School District trustees election began on July 18, but almost two weeks into the process, only two people have actually filed paperwork to run, and education advocates are working hard to find someone, anyone, to fill three, or possibly four, vacant seats:

- District 1 (Northeast): After three terms, Trustee Cheryl Bradley has made it clear that she will not run again. However, so far there's no sign of a replacement.

- District 4 (Northwest): Board president Vince Torres made the unexpected announcement in April that he is stepping down after two terms. His surprise departure left a major gap and, like District 1, no name has emerged to replace him.

- District 6 (Southeast): Lori Moya also steps down after two terms. She already has a confirmed candidate to replace her: Former Austin Council of PTAs president Monica Sanchez has filed the requisite paperwork with the district to run. However, she was seen in some quarters as too supportive of former superintendent Meria Carstarphen, and may well face opposition from education advocate and PR consultant Paul Saldaña.

- District 7 (Southwest): With Bradley's departure and if he is re-elected, then Robert Schneider becomes the longest-tenured member of the board. He has filed his paperwork to run again (and already made public his intention to run for board president if he wins). Neither of his two declared challengers – AMD creative director and district Boundary Advisory Committee member Yasmin Wagner and former teacher-turned-Realtor Theresa Bastian – has formally entered the race, but Wagner has at least designated a treasurer.

- At-Large Place 9: Trustee Tamala Barksdale has been taciturn about her electoral future since some noncommittal statements in April. Education advocates are looking at Barksdale as the key to this election.

If she doesn't run, there is at least one candidate rumored to be lined up to replace her. But if she does declare, she's likely to be unbeatable, and any challengers would likely either step aside or move into another slot. She's expected to make a statement of some kind this week or early next, but there is already mounting frustration about her silence: With 70 declared City Council candidates, it's taking weeks to get something as simple as campaign fliers printed. Until Barksdale moves, these races lag further and further behind.

Can Davis Reverse Poll Numbers?

Good fundraising numbers but bleak polls: The vying totals are causing heartburn in the campaign offices of Sen. Wendy Davis as she continues to trail behind the seemingly unstoppable Attorney General Greg Abbott in the race to become Texas' next governor.

In the latest poll of 4,320 Texans, released on July 28 by CBS, The New York Times, and British pollsters YouGov, Abbott is romping ahead with an impressive 17-point margin. Breaking down the numbers, 50% of respondents said they would definitely vote for Abbott, with another 4% saying they'd lean that way. By contrast, Davis only pulled in 34% of solid support, with an extra 3% leaning towards her. If these numbers are correct, then there are only 9% of voters still up for grabs, and over half of them say they have no plans to vote.

It's yet another depressing poll for the Davis campaign. If they hold, she will face the worst blowout Texas Democrats have endured in the governor's race since 1998, when Land Commissioner Garry Mauro went down by 36 points to future president George W. Bush. Most worryingly, the poll shows Davis actually losing ground. Last summer, when the two first squared off, she was trailing in most polls by around 8%. However, since the beginning of the year, Abbott has held a comfortable double-digit lead in surveys by Public Policy Polling, Rasmussen, and UT. This has simply reaffirmed the widespread belief that Davis' campaign has been abysmal – marred by lousy media relations and a failure to control the narrative.

That said, the numbers may not actually be so bleak for Davis. The Texas poll was part of a national survey of all governor and U.S. Senate races around the country, and the results consistently tracked in favor of Republicans: Not a surprise, since this off-year election is expected to favor the GOP. However, YouGov's numbers track heavily off from just about every other poll out there – often halving the leads of popular Democratic candidates like New Jersey Senate hopeful Cory Booker, or pulling troubled Republicans like Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker a little bit out of the danger zone.

The issue seems to be how the poll was done: via the Internet, rather than the traditional randomized phone calls to registered voters. With the decline in the number of home phone lines, those calls have become less and less useful to pollsters. So while online polling has traditionally been viewed as worth less than the paper it's not written on, YouGov has been refining the methodology. However, Democrats point out one major flaw: that depending on online polling means they're less likely to get the opinions of people without Internet access. That means the poor, minorities, and the elderly.

More significantly, YouGov did not include any third-party candidates. In Texas, Libertarian Kathie Glass did not make the cut. Still, not even extreme optimism on behalf of the Davis campaign could allow them to believe that Glass would pull 17% out of the Abbott base.

If Davis' supporters are not as numerous as Abbott's, at least they are still willing to put their hands into their wallets. On July 15, her campaign announced some very positive and competitive campaign finance numbers. In her semiannual filing with the Texas Ethics Commission, Davis reported that Wendy Davis for Governor had raised $9.8 million. Combined with the $4.9 million fundraising effort of the Texas Victory Committee (a joint project of Wendy Davis for Governor and Democratic activist group Battleground Texas), that places her in a competitive situation with her opponent, and the $11.1 million raised by Texans for Greg Abbott since primary day.

Davis' campaign also highlights the breadth of donations, with $27 million from more than 140,000 contributors since July 2013. By comparison, much of Abbott's funding came from big corporate donors, such as $12,500 from energy mogul T.

Wendy Davis

Greg Abbott

Boone Pickens, and $26,000 from chicken tycoon and anti-workers' rights campaigner Lonnie Pilgrim.

Unfortunately for Davis' aspirations, she does not have much of that cash left. Between Texas Victory and her own campaign, she has barely $8 million in the coffers, compared to Abbott's $36-million war chest. Moreover, Abbott's campaign has sniped at the amount of cash Davis received from out of state donors – while glossing over his own cash from New York and California. That includes $25,000 to Abbott from David Koch

– yes, of the Kochs. That came after similar sums last year from both David's brother Charles, and Charles' son Chase.

Davis' campaign has tried to find fresh traction by pointing out that Abbott has consistently issued business-friendly opinions – most recently, effectively declaring the chemical stockpiles of fertilizer plants like those owned by the Kochs to be a state secret. But unless she can find a way to raise the money to get that message out, that double-digit polling deficit could translate into an election-day disaster. – Richard Whittaker

THE HIGHTOWER REPORT BY JIM HIGHTOWER

DO-NOTHING CONGRESS TAKES A VACATION

When I heard that our Congress critters were taking an extended vacation for all of August and part of September, I had two incongruous reactions: anger ... and gratitude.

Gratitude, because their vacation gives us a five-week break from the spectacle of right-wing mad dogs in the House yapping, foaming at the mouth, and running around in circles.

"Kill the minimum wage," they howl, "repeal Obamacare, deport immigrant children, re-invade Iraq, impeach Obama" ... and yadda yadda yadda.

Yet, nutty as they are, it's also infuriating that these pampered politicians feel entitled to such a vacation. It's another sign of their total disconnect from the hard realities of the workaday majority they're supposed to serve. EARTH TO CONGRESS CRITTERS: Most American families are being hosed out of the middle class, having to work harder and longer for less pay, no benefits, and not even two weeks off, much less a five-week getaway.

In the spirit of fairness, though, I should concede that the current do-nothing House has been setting an eight-year performance record in one category of congressional activity: junketeering. Yes, not only does this bunch love to vacation, but it also tiptoes around the ethics rules so lobbyists can pay for their trips. Not since the sleazy days of pay-to-play überlobbyist Jack Abramoff have

House members taken as many junkets, financed by corporate interests.

Oh, excuse me, they're called "fact-finding missions," not junkets. By whatever name, nearly 1,900 of the free trips were enjoyed last year by lawmakers, their spouses, and staff – paid for by private entities seeking legislative favors.

Adding to the disgust, House leaders very quietly axed an ethics requirement this year that lawmakers must disclose these travel freebies in their personal financial disclosure forms. Yet they wonder why their public approval ratings are in the ditch.

Kylie Jack and Petticoat Fair's Kirk Andrews

Anatomy of an Understanding

How an unfortunate fitting room encounter brought Petticoat Fair to a session called 'Trans 101'

BY KATE X MESSER

When Kylie Jack headed out to shop with her girlfriend on Saturday, June 28, she wasn't thinking about the social media shitstorm that would consume her next few weeks. The tech and start-up consultant was about to go on vacation and was hoping to pick up a few nice bras. She knew exactly where she wanted to go. She'd visited this place in the past with a friend and said, "We had a great experience." Jack has a few recognizable Austin start-ups under her belt (Front Gate Tickets, for one), so of course she checked the Web. "Reddit has a SubReddit called 'A Bra That Fits,' and [this place had] gotten good reviews. I thought, 'This is the place to go.'"

When the sales staff of Petticoat Fair opened the store that Saturday, they weren't thinking about having to defend the reputation of their popular and respected women's foundation garments store – a place, declares their website, where original "owners Bob and Betty Andrews' concept was to provide a service to all women in need of intimate apparel." It was just another Saturday. "Busy ... slammed," according to one of the 10 women working that day, and "the fitting rooms were packed." Petticoat Fair's three main fitting areas house 18 fitting rooms. That day, the crew would ring up sales for more than 145 clients.

Unfortunately, Kylie Jack was not one of them. Jack is a transgender woman, and her account of what occurred when she went in to get fitted for a new bra sparked an Internet conflagration that quickly spread out of control. Jack says she was denied a fitting for being trans but not yet having sex reassignment surgery. "I [was] asked, 'Are you an anatomical female?'" She and the saleswoman exchanged further words – a frustrating back-and-forth, says Jack.

The meeting ended with her leaving the store in tears.

"I typically write about all my experiences with discrimination or misgendering and just put it out there," says Jack. So later that afternoon, she put it out there. She took to social media with a series of posts, including this Facebook message: "Hello Austinites: today I went for a bra fitting at Petticoat Fair, where an employee humiliated me by asking for ID stating I was female and saying I needed bottom surgery in order to get a fitting. If you are in solidarity with trans women, please boycott Petticoat Fair until they remove their transphobic and cissexist policies. Please feel free to share this post." and tweet: "Apparently if you are a trans woman you need two forms of id & letter from a surgeon for SRS to get a fucking bra fitting at Petticoat Fair."

"Surprisingly," she says, the messages "got a lot of traction." All evening and into the next day, the posts triggered the dry heave of social media, hacking up furballs of indignation, anecdotes, and calls to action, as commenters lined up behind Petticoat Fair or Jack, for and against, hurling insults and rage at the insensitivities and aggressions committed by whichever side set them off – all this, while only one version of the story had circulated.

Internet Justice

The next evening, after the full brunt of a day's worth of Internet kangaroo court, Petticoat Fair owner Kirk Andrews also posted on Facebook – something the 54-year-old store owner doesn't often do – issuing a public statement clarifying what he called the "misconception that Petticoat Fair has a policy of not working with the transgendered community." The 595-word post included an apology to Kylie Jack, explanations of the store's protocol in handling customers and concerns for women's safety, and a statement that the shop was "open to a meeting with leaders of the transgendered community to discuss a better approach."

Loyal customers and some outside observers reacted positively (though some could not resist hateful comments encouraging trans-exclusion), but skeptics of Andrews' intent called him out for using of the term "transgendered" (instead of "transgender" – see "Trans 101 Glossary," p.27), for the Facebook post reading like a nonapology, and for assertions which some characterized as transphobic.

The blogosphere lit up with more boycott calls and random copycat weigh-ins, bearing headlines intended to titillate, like: "Texas Bra Shop Humiliates Trans Woman, Despite 'Inclusive Policy'" and "How to sell a transgender woman a bra without being a total jerk." That's all well and good for hits face-to-face that Monday morning.

"My concern at that point was the bad experience that Kylie had," insists Andrews. And while the Internet peanut gallery might have felt more satisfied with a full she-said/she-said transcript from the initial fitting-room fracas, Andrews was not interested. From the outset, despite flubs of language insensitivity, Andrews has accepted full responsibility for Jack's bad customer experience. "We had a very cordial initial visit. I laid out where I was coming from, what my concern was – not what was going on in social media. I don't care about that. This was my customer: What are her needs, and how can I do this better?"

After the meeting, once she felt convinced that Petticoat Fair was indeed earnest about implementing policies to better comply with the city ordinance, Jack felt compelled to go online and, as she says, "call off the dogs."

Unfortunately, those dogs would not heel. Some posters called her out for turning down the heat: "A few people said, 'Why did you kick up this big shitstorm if you're just going to let it go now?'" she said. "I knew that Kirk was meeting with the Transgender Education Network, and I didn't feel like it's my place to comment until they had a chance to talk. Some people pushed back, saying, 'Well, you don't know that it's true. You're having the wool pulled over your eyes.'"

"You can't win," says Jack. "If you let up and give people breathing room when they're showing positive progress, someone will accuse you of playing 'respectability politics.' Now if you keep the screws on, then you're accused of being [one of] those angry and outraged transwomen."

"After I'd visited Kylie," says Andrews, "I got an email from TENT offering support, your name [this writer's] came up, and it was at this point that things started rolling."

Kylie Jack is a transgender woman, and her account of what occurred when she went in to get fitted for a new bra sparked an Internet conflagration that quickly spread out of control.

The Right Fit

My name. Right. That's another story.

My personal experience with Petticoat Fair goes back to the mid-Nineties. Hanging out in my newly minted status as actual dyke at Downtown gay bar Charlie's, the topic of boobs percolated in the group of mostly (what we now call) "ciswomen" (see "Glossary") plus two (what we now call) transwomen, one of whom was in the process of transition, while the other ID'd as drag queen – in this case, a gay man who performed as female and colloquially referred to herself as "she," de rigueur for the era of voguing queens and sashaying shantés, who threw around the word "tranny" like it was acceptable, which, in that insular historical context, it was. Then again, so was indoor smoking, dial-up Internet, and the Macarena.

Boobs were the topic of the table, and I remember complaining about mine becoming increasingly back-achy. “Girl, head over to Petticoat Fair; they’ll take good care of you.” This testament was shared across the gender skew. Personal testimonies of stellar service abounded. I protested. My head was shaved, and I might as well have had the word “bulldagger” branded into my forehead. “It don’t matter,” said one of the transwomen. “They’re very nice and understanding.” Miss Betty, the store owner, was known for caring for those for whom gender necessitated a sensitive approach. It was a sentiment I began to hear regularly.

It took me a while to muster the courage to go, but I finally decided to take the plunge. What was the worst that could happen? Passing as my own birth gender? What the hell. My first fitting was marred only by the 10 tons of personal baggage I carried, thinking I was not fit for this exclusively women’s space. A wonderful clerk named Magda forever changed my relationship to caring for my girls, and for more than 15 years, I’ve been a loyal Petticoater.

(It was also around that time that I first became aware of the musician and tech wizard I would later come to know as Kylie Jack. Jack began her process of transitioning in August 2013.)

Petticoat Fair has grown considerably since my first visit. The back fitting-room section was especially enhanced in two major expansions in 2003 and 2010.

The anatomy of the back fitting areas is like a pair of lungs, one section flanking either side of the store’s stockroom heart. In each of the fitting areas, a number of ample personal fitting rooms, each with a fully closing door, ring the center, where a large three-way mirror is available, intended for customers – brides, especially – wanting to see how an undergarment looks under clothing. Unlike in most retail outlets, customers here are brought back by fitters who work intimately with them until a fit is found. It starts with a hands-on tape measure, proceeds into recommendations and numerous try-ons, and wraps up with demonstrations of how best to put the dang thing on (different styles, different body types) and care for it.

Mutual Education

Young Kirk Andrews was the receptionist for his parents’ business. “Until my voice changed,” he laughs. He took over the store following Bob and Betty’s retirement, and he remembers how his dad and mom ran Petticoat Fair. “It was about working one-on-one with every woman as an individual, understanding her needs. It was a different time back in the Sixties, but it was very open [here with transwomen] coming in, saying, ‘Betty, I’ve heard that you’re willing to help. Here’s what I’m going through.’ And Mom would do it. So, that’s the story, with [Petticoat Fair and the trans] community.”

Meghan Stabler, who served on President Obama’s LGBT Policy Committee (l), and Lisa Scheps, a founder of the Transgender Education Network of Texas

“It’s intimate. It’s the nature of our business. We have to ask questions that would otherwise be thought inappropriate,” relates one fitter. Andrews would only endorse my talking to his staff about this matter if I agreed to leave their names off the record. Most of them have worked with transgender clients, and some have regular transgender clients. The woman who met with Jack that Saturday is regarded as having experience and sensitivity with trans customers. What happened in the room between the two women has only been we don’t agree.” They learned, for example, that the term “transgender” has become an umbrella term to replace terms that have slipped out of favor, such as “transvestite.” They discussed how best to work with trans clients and offer solutions without treating those clients as “others.”

Some painful topics were broached as well, including the fitting-room equivalent of “bathroom panic,” the card that is played when arguments ensue about trans access to public restrooms. That is, the assertion that there are men with nefarious intenshared publicly from Jack’s perspective; where their accounts agree is that there was a heated back-and-forth that felt like it was going nowhere. But ultimately, says Andrews, “that’s not relevant moving forward. It’s my responsibility to make sure my clients are comfortable.”

When Lisa Scheps, a founder of the Transgender Education Network of Texas, first read Andrews’ post, she says, “I saw someone who wanted to do the right thing, his heart was clearly in the right place. He certainly was in need of some education.” After their first meeting, it was agreed that the TENT rep would facilitate a ‘Trans 101’ sensitivity training for Andrews and his staff.

The staff was receptive, learning “basic things: gender identity, gender expression, sexual orientation,” says Scheps. The group reviewed how terms have evolved over the years. “Language trips us up more than anything else. Even within our own community, tions who try to access women’s spaces dressed as women. In the case of Petticoat Fair, however, according to Andrews and his staff, that is a situation they actually do confront. “It is not trans women who frighten us or put us on guard,” insists Andrews. “We’re not scared of anybody who’s authentic. And it’s up to us – on a moment’s notice, often in a store packed with customers – to determine the authenticity of who that person is,” and that takes judgment calls, contingencies, sometimes mind-reading, and now, he realizes, a lot more sensitivity.

Andrews expressed to Scheps that he felt dismissed when he tried to address the store’s reality of “creepers” to her. Scheps offhandedly, but earnestly joked, “Yeah, how many times does that really happen? When an impostor tries to come in here?” “In unison,” says Andrews, “the whole staff said, ‘All the time.’ We deal with it all the time.” Additionally, fitters are tasked with navigating fluid crowds of customers that sometimes include a disruptive ciswoman or two, or husbands and boyfriends – whether controlling or well-meaning – who want to access the dressing-room areas that are same-gendered space by design. “That’s counterproductive to [the environment] we want to create here. That is still our biggest challenge – how to accommodate everybody.”

Scheps listened and concurred, “Creepers gonna creep.”

A Delicate Balance

Scheps also spoke candidly and anecdotally, relating her own experiences to clarify that “there is no one way to be transgender. My truth is my truth, and other people’s are other people’s.” She shared how vulnerable it feels walking into a place like Petticoat Fair as a woman who was not raised as a woman. At that point, the tables turned as the women began piping up with bra solutions to help her overcome her fears and to look good. “It happened very organically,” says Scheps, and by the time they wrapped, she “felt very encouraged for the transgender community to find this room full of 13 or 14 mentors. Big sisters, if you will. Where transgender women can come and get a lot of information that’s not just about foundations.”

Austinite Meghan Stabler, a national LGBT activist who served on Obama’s national LGBT Policy Committee, also met with Andrews and agrees with Scheps: “We’re vulnerable. I never had a sister around me to show me how to dress. ‘My god, you look awful in that. Do you seriously want to go out in that thing?’ Yeah we probably mess up, we probably don’t wear the right things. We’ve gone to enough lobby days where the Thirties flapper dress is probably not the right thing to wear. But these are common mistakes because, remember, this is a second puberty that we’re going through. We need that guidance. We need help; our community is one of the most vulnerable out there.”

“I made a decision very early on in transition,” shares Kylie Jack, “that I was not going to be closeted or stealth. That I would be very open about everything because it was a chance to help educate people and bring understanding.” Her willingness to shut out the outside chatter and keep the doors of conversation open despite very real hurt and humiliation are exactly what made the chance of an accord possible. “The thing about social media,” she tweeted back on July 3, “is it’s my biggest support network and also my biggest source of shittiness.”

“Kirk [Andrews] has a challenge,” offers Scheps, “to make all of his clients comfortable – even the ones that say, ‘I don’t want to be with that woman who looks like a man,’ which is basically what people are saying. So he’s walking a tightrope, which is very, very difficult but very important. I think we all agree here, that Petticoat Fair is taking the right steps to learn how to walk that tightrope in a way that we can honor same-gendered spaces and honor all of his customers, and at the same time, keep our heads high.” ■

TRANS 101 Glossary

Transgender (adjective, not a noun) An umbrella term for most terms associated with gender non-conformity – those for whom identity, expression, and/or behavior does not conform to expected gender norms. (The use of “transgender” as a noun or “transgendered” as an adjective is often considered derogatory.)

Trans (adjective) Acceptable shorthand for “transgender.”

Sex The classification of people as male or female – assigned at birth.

Transman (also FTM) Female-to-male identifying individual.

Transwoman (also MTF) Male-to-female identifying individual.

Gender Identity Internal sense of being male, female, or something else.

Gender Expression External manifestation of being male, female, or something else (often through behavior, clothing, hairstyles, voice, or body characteristics).

Cisgender Cis- (Latin), meaning “on this side of,” an antonym for Latin-derived prefix trans-, meaning “across from” or “on the other side of.” Cisgender implies one for whom gender expression and gender identity match sex assigned at birth.

Transsexual One for whom gender identity is different from their assigned sex at birth and who seeks to transition. Term is out of favor; thought to be overly clinical.

Cross-dresser One for whom gender expression is manifest in clothing (etc.) different from that stereotypically worn by those of their assigned sex at birth. Term should never be used when describing a person who is transitioning or has transitioned.

Transvestite A cross-dresser. Term is currently out of favor; considered derogatory.

Queer (adjective and noun) Reclaimed term to include a sensibility as well as indication of gender/sexual nonconforming status. An inclusive alternative to “gay.” Use varies and can be taken as derogatory or affirming depending on context.

Genderqueer A term used by those who identify as gender nonconforming and sometimes those who intentionally challenge expectations.

Sex Reassignment Surgery Procedures that change one's body to reflect gender identity, including top surgery (breast removal or enhancement), bottom surgery (genital removal or reconstruction).

Sex Change or Sex Change Surgery
Considered derogatory terms.

Sexual Orientation A person's attraction to members of the same sex and/or a different sex (lesbian, gay, bisexual, heterosexual, or asexual).

Transition The period when a person begins living their gender identity rather than their gender assigned at birth. Process is unique to the individual and includes any combination or order of name change, change in dress and grooming habits, taking hormones, having surgery, or changing identity documents (e.g., drivers license, Social Security records) to reflect one's gender identity. Medical and legal steps are often prohibitively expensive.

Intersex People born with a reproductive or sexual anatomy and/or chromosome pattern atypical to definitions of male or female. Also known as differences of sex development (DSD).

Drag Queen (Usually male) performer who dresses in stereotypical and often exaggerated garb as women for entertainment purposes. Sometimes used as a derogatory term to diminish transgender women.

Drag King (Usually female) performer who dresses in stereotypical and often exaggerated garb as men for entertainment purposes.

PROBLEMATIC OR DEROGATORY TERMS TO AVOID: she-male, he-she, it, tranny, shim, gender-bender, transgendered, transgenders, pre-op, post-op, sex change

Sources: various, including GLAAD, TENT, and National Center for Transgender Equality

ARCOS Dance Company members performing The Warriors: A Love Story

COURTESY OF ARCOS DANCE COMPANY

Edinburgh Festival Fringe

THREE CHOREOGRAPHERS TAKE AUSTIN TO THE SCOTTISH FEST THAT'S BIGGER THAN SXSW

When Ellen Bartel travels to Edinburgh, Scotland, to perform during the Edinburgh Festival Fringe, she'll do so as a Creative Ambassador for the city of Austin. One duty of an Ambassador is to present a gift from the city of Austin, a stone sculpture of a star adorned with record albums, to a cultural leader in Edinburgh. However, a cultural leader with a free hour was difficult to find during the hectic days leading up to the immense festival, which will host over 3,000 (official) performance works and exhibitions – about 1,000 more than the number of (official) bands who played South by Southwest this year. Finally, the day before Bartel's flight, Austin found her a contact, the artistic director of a Scottish organization called Dance Base.

Besides the sculpture, Bartel will take dancer Amy Myers, a member of Ellen Bartel Dance Collective, to perform a duet on a mixed showcase produced by an organization called Dance-Forms. Kaysie Seitz* Brown, a member of the dance faculty at Texas State University, will perform a solo, developed in collaboration with her colleague Ana Baer Carrillo, on the same program. A third Austin group, ARCOS Dance Company, which relocated from Santa Fe late last year, is taking its full-length show The Warriors: A Love Story, which won acclaim for its premiere run in 2013.

The creators of these three works seem to represent – at the risk of oversimplification – three areas that converge in the Austin arts landscape. Bartel is a watchful, old-guard Austinite whose work here dates back to the Slacker era. She was fringe when Austin itself was fringe and remains, die-hard, on the fringe. Bartel's duet with Myers, titled "In the World of Things and Stuff," begins with side-by-side headstands, their sneakers in the air and their brightly patterned skirts falling down over their tanned bodies and cropped haircuts. Their music is being composed by Bartel's longtime collaborator and fellow old-guarder Adam Sultan, who won't reveal it to her until a couple of days before the trip.

Brown and Carrillo, along with Richard Hall, from whom they commissioned a score, represent artists in the academy: faculty and students at Texas State, the University of Texas, and the smaller schools, too. In their piece for Edinburgh, "Capricious Aplomb," the process is as important as the result. Carrillo's video projection includes carefully assembled footage of structures and figures, but audiences will see only glimpses and abstractions, as the footage is projected not on a screen but on Brown's body, draped in white, as her cool, reaching poses sustain and then break into the angles.

ARCOS, directed by Erica Gionfriddo and Curtis Uhlemann, is, perhaps, representative of Austin's new guard, which in many ways isn't so different from the old. It wasn't so much a dance scene but a general creative vibe and quality of life that lured them to Austin. But the fresh tech scene, too, was attractive, as their work aims to innovate with video and sound. The Warriors: A Love Story is based on the World War II convergence of the grandparents of the company's multimedia director, Eliot Gray Fisher. ARCOS has revised and integrated the work for the Fringe, both to make it tourable – the cast was reduced from 10 to seven – and to make the narrative more open and abstract, and thus more accessible for audiences' own connections.

Thanks to a grant from the Rea Charitable Trust, ARCOS will reprise The Warriors in Austin sometime during the 2014-15 season. Brown, too, has plans to perform her solo in her department's next alumni concert. (Bartel doesn't currently have plans to resurrect her duet, though if she's asked) Each artist hopes to bring home new ideas, so influences on future iterations of these works are not out of the question. And it's likely that each will leave something of Austin – maybe less concrete than that sculpture, but an influence just the same – in Edinburgh.

– Jonelle Seitz

'Austin Chronicle' Book Club

READERS TOASTED 'THE LONG GOODBYE,' EAGER TO MOVE INTO 'THE HUNDRED-YEAR HOUSE'

"I belonged in Idle Valley like a pearl onion on a banana split."

That was just one of several "Chandlerisms" shared by participants in the first-ever Austin Chronicle Book Club, held on Twitter Monday, July 28. In discussing the 1953 crime fiction classic The Long Goodbye, talk turned to the author's memorable way with metaphors and similes, and readers chimed in with their favorite turns of phrase. (That's Raymond Chandler, by the way, not Chandler Bing, though the Chronicle's Michael Barnett couldn't resist linking to a BuzzFeed list of the latter, too.) "The girl gave him a look which ought to have stuck at least four inches out of his back" was one favored by Managing Editor Kimberley Jones, while Amy Gentry contributed: "A white knight for me is as rare as a fat postman." They were proof that, as Gentry put it, "Nobody tortures a metaphor like Chandler AND MAKES YOU LIKE IT." In the course of the hourlong chat, conversation covered the excessive drinking in the novel ("It made my liver hurt," tweeted Laura Watkins Baker), Chandler butting heads with Hitchcock on the script for Strangers on a Train, Altman's 1973 film of The Long Goodbye (Beaumont Paul: "I think of all the movie Marlowes, it's Gould ... that best captures the literary Marlowe"), and why Chandler is still worth reading ("Because he has style," noted Corrin Foster. "And his portrayal of 1950s Americana is the best there is.") You can follow the whole conversation online at Twitter, #ACreads.

At the end of the hour, the selection for August was announced: The Hundred-Year House, a new spooky comic novel by Rebecca Makkai, author of The Borrower. Grab a copy now, read it, and join us Monday, Aug. 25, 7pm, to talk about haunted houses, artists' colonies, and luck.

Keeping Score

SANDY CARSON

With a bumper crop of musicals onstage in August, musical directors give some notes on what they do

BY ADAM ROBERTS

“Tradition!”

I’m sitting at the piano, leading a music rehearsal for Fiddler on the Roof. The Jerry Bock-Sheldon Harnick-Joseph Stein classic marks the 50th anniversary of its Broadway bow this year, and the Austin Jewish Repertory Theater (of which I am artistic director) and Trinity Street Players are mounting a joint production to celebrate.

You’ve probably done the math by now and concluded that Fiddler premiered in 1964, toward the end of what many scholars refer to as Broadway’s “Golden Age.” Most commentators place the beginning of that period with Oklahoma!, which also happens to be receiving a revival in Austin this summer, courtesy of Zilker Theatre Productions. But that’s not all, folks: At least 11 – count ‘em, 11 – musicals are running on area stages during August. That’s an average of one opening every three days.

These shows are a varied lot, covering not only the musical’s Golden Age but every era since, right up to today – two of the works are even brand new. But as different as they are, they all do feature music, which means every one of those productions needs someone to shape its sound. In my experience doing just that as a music director, I’ve found that people are often surprised to learn that musical theatre scores are not all sung in the “same way.” Careful attention must be paid to matters of style when coaching performers within the context of a particular production. What serves someone well singing Fiddler won’t necessarily be as effective for singing Footloose or The Who’s Tommy, a consideration of which Oklahoma! co-musical director Molly Wissinger was particularly aware: “I was very conscious of striving to marry a Golden Age singing style – some would call this ‘legit’ or ‘classical’ – with the context of the [story] so that the vocal performances and arrangements felt as lively as the characters themselves without losing the beauty of the line,” she says. “Our conductor and my co-musical director, James Welsch, also worked countless hours to mingle the elements of classical musical-theatre structure and orchestration with the grounded intention of the themes and, most importantly, to serve us in our [outdoor] setting.”

Just a short drive from Zilker Park down Barton Springs Road at the Dougherty Arts Center, musical-loving audiences will be treated to very different kinds of sounds at Austin Theatre Project’s Godspell. “Of course, the obvious difference between Godspell and a more traditional score (such as Oklahoma!) is the style of music that comes [after] a 30-year span of time,” says David Blackburn, who leads the production’s music. “As a musical director, I find that many actors are much more comfortable singing in the Rodgers and Hammerstein style than they are with the contemporary rock-pop sound you find in Godspell. My job is to help the actors find stylistic skills that allow them to bring a more contemporary sound to their voices ... [since] Godspell was part of the trend of the late Sixties and early Seventies that saw American musical theatre make the transition from old-school musical theatre to [a] new rock-pop sound that guaranteed a new and vibrant audience.”

That rock-pop sound is heightened even more in Footloose – playing just across Butler Park from the Dougherty in the Long Center’s Rollins Studio Theatre – since its songwriters, Dean Pitchford and Tom Snow, earned their stripes writing pop and rock hits, and they scored it for a rock combo. “Footloose is iconic, and it starts with the songs,” asserts Michael McKelvey, vocal director of the Summer Stock Austin production. “The story and message of the show is one an audience can rally behind, but the songs are what make this show appealing for most audience members [age 30 and older], because it takes them to a memorable place in their lives. The pop-rock style of the show, although identified with the late Eighties or early Nineties, seems to have the catchy melodies and pumping rhythmic drive that is infectious for audiences of all ages.”

Chicago – another Summer Stock production on the Rollins stage this month – also draws from popular music styles, but in their Seventies score composer John Kander and lyricist Fred Ebb sought to evoke the hit songs of five decades earlier. Helping performers straddle a sound that is at the same time post-Golden Age musical and Roaring Twenties jazz is a unique challenge for a musical director, but one for which Lyn Koenning, with her eclectic musical background, is perfectly suited: “Because the music of Chicago is influenced more by the popular/jazz music genre than classical, I use that aspect of my skill set to work on the vocals and instrumentals for the show. I draw mostly on my experience playing and singing with pop bands and the jukebox and contemporary musicals I’ve directed. The musicians in the orchestra have to be very comfortable with the syncopated rhythms and idioms of ragtime and jazz music but also the nuances of underscoring dialogue and the exact timing that is an element of all genres of musical theatre.”

Old and new are also mixed in the new musical Bright Now Beyond, premiering at Salvage Vanguard Theater, but in a distinctly different way. Musical director Peter Stopschinski describes the score by composer Bobby Halvorsen as “some combination of [atonal composer Arnold] Schoenberg’s Pierrot Lunaire and a mix-tape from the Nineties.” Serving as musical director on the original production of a new work almost always means collaborating with the show’s composer, an element of Stopschinski’s experience that seems to have been especially fulfilling for him in this instance: “The composer has a master’s degree in vocal performance, so the music is skillfully written for voice,” he explains. Audiences are likely to appreciate its eclecticism, too, as “it ranges from powerful and fun grrrl rock songs with drum machine and electronics to beautiful arias with live chamber orchestra.”

Ah, yes. “Tradition!” Serving as musical director on Fiddler reminds me that the title of its iconic opening number doesn’t refer only to the customs of the shtetl in which the play is set, but also to the broad, polystylistic nature of the American musical theatre sound throughout its history. Perched between two distinct stylistic periods of musical theatre – the Golden Age sounds of Broadway with the later rock scores – Fiddler offers its own musical meld: of splashy Broadway production sounds with Eastern European folk scales and melodies reminiscent of the synagogue. And this palette is, perhaps, an especially fitting analogy for the spectrum of styles offered to Austin audiences in a broad musical theatre buffet this month: a feast of musical traditions old and new. ■

People are often surprised to learn that musical theatre scores are not all sung in the “same way.” What serves someone well singing Fiddler on the Roof won’t necessarily be as effective for singing Footloose or The Who’s Tommy.

EXHIBITIONISM

Cyrano de Bergerac

City Theatre, 3823-D Airport, 512/524-2870

www.citytheatreAustin.org

Through Aug. 10

Running Time: 3 hr., 15 min.

Marketing copy for City Theatre's production of Cyrano de Bergerac hails the play as "one of the finest ... ever written!" – a highly subjective statement, of course, but one I can somewhat get behind. After all, Cyrano has something for everyone: lots of action and adventure, loads of romance, and some tear-jerking scenes in addition to plenty of comedic ones. The story has been adapted countless times (City employs the popular Anthony Burgess translation of Edmund Rostand's original), perhaps thanks to its universal and timeless narrative.

In addition to being a fine play, Cyrano is a lengthy one. Packing in all the swashbuckling, lengthy monologues, battles, puns, and alternating frivolity/heartstring-tugging, City's rendition runs well over three hours, including two intermissions. Although the pacing of the opening night performance wasn't plodding by any means, the proceedings could stand to move more briskly – though I imagine the tempo is likely to tighten as the run continues. The play isn't only long by today's standards, but also large. City's production features 19 actors on its close-quartered stage, and kudos to director Jeff Hinkle for his use of the space, providing interesting and effective stage pictures even when the full cast is present. With so much stage combat (excitingly choreographed by Wesley Riddle), ensuring that every actor is seen in a dynamic way can become a bit of a chess game, and Hinkle proves an impressive player here.

As is the case with many shows named for their lead roles, the success of any staging of Cyrano rests on the shoulders of its title character. Andrew Bosworth delivers a stellar turn as the poet-by-proxy, infusing the show with an energy and a panache (a term which the play is said to have introduced to the English language) on which the rest of the production rides. Bosworth's Cyrano is larger than life when such a presence is called for and intensely vulnerable in his most intimate moments. As often occurs when a character is drawn and interpreted in such a big way, the other cast members frequently struggle to match Bosworth's stamina and presence, resulting in a sense of "backgroundedness" that they inhabit for much of the evening.

Again, the nice thing about Cyrano is that no matter what you're craving in theatrical fare, it's offered up in the play at some point. City Theatre's version may be more modest than many in terms of production values, but as a star vehicle helmed by a very engaging star, the show is able to retain wind in its sails much of the time. – Adam Roberts

'Drawn onward: Jonathan Gruchawka & Mark Leavens'

Co-Lab Project Space, 613 Allen

www.co-labprojects.org

Through Aug. 2

The show presents installation, paintings, objects, and video of disused structures that bear the hallmarks of utilitarian form and, through these, addresses decaying forces particular to human fabrication.

Gruchawka's Moving Backwards fills the interior space with rough timber framing, suspended wires, and an 8-channel sound system encased in bizarre cubic jelly at various points in the structure. The audio dips in and out of discernibility, partly because of the clip itself, and partly because it's muffled by the broth-colored gelatin. If the framing is a skeleton, the physical remnants of a structure, then the sound is the structure's ghost, the remnants of the soul.

A few speakers have broken free, having rattled a section of the sickly gel loose and splatting it bloblike on the floor below. I was suspicious of it being an accident, but the murmurs from the opening crowd conferred that it brought something to the piece. It made those forces of decay no less nefarious, but strangely seductive and ongoing – like we were each waiting for the next bit to fall off or the structure to collapse in on itself.

Paintings by both Gruchawka and Leavens are scattered about the back hall, abstracting similar forgotten structures. Leavens' work is more polite than Gruchawka's, but there's less there for me to linger with. His brightly colored untitled mural outside the gallery, however, does tie the actual building to the work it contains. It also provides a more optimistic spin on the show, more concerned with internal architecture's formal qualities of light, shadow, and color than its conceptual qualities or potential as metaphor.

Within view of the mural stands Gruchawka's Drawn Onward like a modern-day Henge. The series of boxy forms, the height of a man, are made of plaster, cardboard, lathe, and cheap

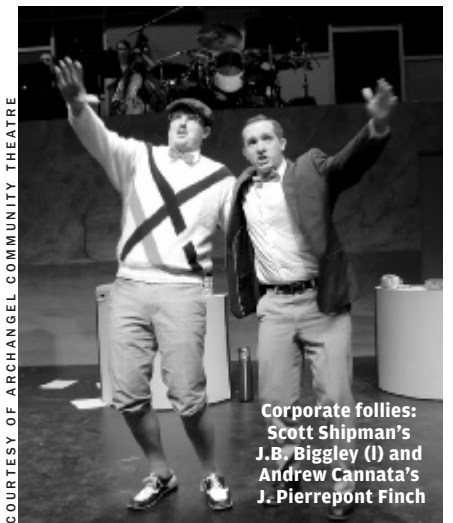

How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying

Gloria Delgado Performing Arts Theatre, St. Michael's Academy, 3000 Barton Creek Blvd.
www.austinact.org
Through Aug. 3
Running time: 2 hr., 45 min.

With the Archangel Community Theatre production of Frank Loesser's Pulitzer-winning musical, the dramatic experience begins the moment you leave your driveway. As your destination's surrounded by some of the most breathtaking vistas the Texas Hill Country has to offer, now's the time to suggest a night out to that friend with a convertible Bugatti ... or Miata. With the show's evening curtain time of 7:30pm, you'll be en route during what photographers affectionately call the "golden hour."

The venue is part of St. Michael's Catholic Academy, and Archangel, as its resident company, serves as a talent incubator for young people, who are given the opportunity to work with musical theatre pros from across the region. This probably won't be the place you'll see innovation or edgy material, but if your tastes lean more toward the traditional, St. Michael's certainly has the resources to stage a professional production.

Director Ivan Klousia has set the show – a satirical view of big business sprung from Shepherd Mead's bestselling book of the same name – in the play's original time period of the early Sixties. Indeed, it's difficult to imagine this story taking place at any other time in history, as the women in the office at the World Wide Wicket Company are all secretaries who we're assured are not toys (is that so?), although the men's attitudes suggest otherwise. Still, costume designer Rick Lin decks them out in pleasant sherbet colors, and the effect feels as embalming as watching a rerun of The Bob Newhart Show. In short, we're willing to deal with a little political incorrectness in exchange for a brief return to simpler times.

The large proscenium stage is ample enough to accommodate plenty of performers onstage at once – 21 during an amusingly jittery number during the crisis of running out of coffee, and nearly 30 in the finale. By far the most impressive musical numbers are "Grand Old Ivy" and (oh, the irony!) "Brotherhood of Man." The latter is a baritone powerhouse and the former really showcases the comedic flair of Scott Shipman as J.B. Biggley, the boss whose ladder-climbing employee, J. Pierrepont Finch (Andrew Cannata), is determined to fake it 'til he makes it.

The students at St. Michael's are lucky to have access to a sound system with this level of quality, and the Gloria Delgado Performing Arts Theatre seats nearly 400 people, so I can see the case for using microphones. Still, there's no getting around the fact that amplified sound is in direct conflict with the audience's ability to suspend disbelief – more so when we can see the mics. "What's the opposite of a romantic? A businessman." Romantics might find the "big sound, little warmth" formula here to be a little too strictly business. – Stacy Alexander Smith pine in a method mimicking an older tradition of wall finishing. The sculptures are in various states of distress, one relatively untouched (or repaired) and others demolished.

Paired with this installation screens Dialogue in Progress, a video work by Gruchawka and collaborator Madie Evans. One of the previous structures is circled by two actors: one constantly repairing, the other destroying. As more plaster and pine is administered like a bandage by one actor, equal or greater destruction is brought by the other with increasingly detrimental tools, a box cutter, a spade, a sledgehammer. A fellow viewer spoke my mind to his partner: "Haven't you ever been in a relationship like that?" In the end, the structure is destroyed.

This piece more than the others supports the notion vibrating in the atmosphere above the exhibition that permanence is a myth and that maintenance is the only force holding our human reality together. – Seth Orion Schwaiger

Painting With Clothes

Kari Perkins wears cowboy boots, a flowing green shirt, and a flower necklace made of soft leather to our interview. It's a workday for her; the Austin-based costume designer is wrapping the costumes for her most ambitious project to date, the Angelo Pizzo-directed UT football film that takes place during the 1968 and 1969 game seasons.

Perkins and her team outfitted 400 people each day in period costumes with multiple changes, including hundreds of football uniforms – most of which she had re-created from scratch, and then distressed and aged.

"I had to get the uniform fabric milled, because they don't make that kind of jersey fabric anymore," she says as we walk through what seems like acres of costuming in the former AMD building. "That was important for high-definition – so you could see that little bit of sheen in there, to give it a period look."

Although Perkins was raised in Texas and came to Austin in 1982, football wasn't exactly her first love. Now? "I know more about football now than I ever thought that I would in my entire life." All of the pads, cleats, and helmets had to be made new with modern padding inside, so that realistic reenactments of football plays could be executed safely. Not to mention her extensive historical research into band uniforms and cheerleading costumes.

Perkins specializes in what's called "invisible costume design," meaning that she creates realistic costumes that enhance the storytelling without calling attention to themselves. This is what separates Perkins' films from, say, American Hustle, whose admittedly gorgeous costumes often took center stage. In a film that's all about artifice, it's okay to give fourth billing to a wrap dress; but the soft-spoken Perkins, who got her big break working on Dazed and Confused and

Costume designer Kari Perkins with meticulously re-created UT marching band costumes for the film My All American

has worked with Richard Linklater many times since, seems to share his brand of warm but rigorous humanism.

"How do you enhance this character, but make it subtle enough that it's going to enhance the whole performance and not be a distraction?" is her primary question.

It's safe to say that the costumes in My All American will stand out most to those who were actually there the first time around. Many of the clothes are authentic, not only to the time period, but to the region – like the racks and racks of men's wool suits and jackets, many of which still bear original tags from Fort Worth or San Antonio department stores. She even knows the temperature and weather on each game day re-created in the film, like the cold, drizzly Arkansas game where the stands were a sea of ponchos.

But costumes, Perkins says, reflect more than just historical accuracy. They also reflect the psychology of the characters over the course of the film, and can even help create a rapport between the actors themselves and their characters.

Her example is from Bernie: "When I was first meeting with Jack Black and I was trying stuff on him, he was wearing things very much like Jack Black, which is natural, but he was just feeling like himself putting on clothes. I said, 'Why don't you try hiking your pants up over your belly, like this?' All of a sudden it was like his physical stance changed. It was like this morphing. Bernie started to come out, right then."

Add to all this the need to balance colors onscreen, so that characters neither clash nor fade into each other within a frame or from shot to shot, and you've got a lot to keep track of. "A photographic memory helps," says Perkins. So does a six-inch-thick continuity book loaded with snapshots and scene details.

Perkins – who, after all, chose to build her career and her life in Austin – would rather be poring over old Cactus yearbooks. "In one yearbook for 1968, the skirts are to the knee. Then in 1969, you can see where they just folded the hemline up to make them short. You can actually see the fold."

This is precisely the kind of detail Perkins loves: the barely visible mark of experience that makes every piece of clothing into a story.

Take a sneak peek at the costumes in My All American in this week's online photo gallery.

El Taquito Supremo MINI-CHAIN VIES FOR TACO DOMINATION

El Taquito Riverside is located a stone's throw west of Parker on the south side of Riverside, perched up on the hill in a radiant electric-blue coat. You enter and find a clean, modern interior with some pleasant border tunes rocking away. Order at the counter from the menu of tacos, tortas, enchiladas, and all the rest, then select a beer, margarita, agua fresca, or Mexican soda. After a brief wait, they bring you the order. Stick with the perfect, homemade flour tortillas and head to the salsa bar to choose from five salsas and five condiments.

I've tried almost all of the many taco options ($2-2.25) and they are all fantastic, especially the al pastor – the pork-laden, pineapple-crowned trompo (Spanish for “spinning top”, which the vertical rotisserie resembles) spins majestically in plain view. The meat has a nice chile-glazed richness, perfect when you add some of the grilled chile strips from the salsa bar. The carnitas are moist and unctuous, and the pork in red chile sauce is tender and mildly spicy (cured that right up with some of the fiery green avocado salsa). The bistec is beefy and tender, but was overshadowed by the avocado and cheese; the meat is minced, not sliced. I wasn't a big fan of the carne guisado; the beef was a little tough, and was dominated by potato (spuds in guisado is a no-no in my book).

I tried their posole ($4.99); they make it rojo and not blanco, so it was swimming in a rich, porky, red chile-infused broth. I was surprised with the low hominy content, but that meant more savory pork. The queso fundido with rajas ($6.49) was served in a cast-iron skillet loaded with oozing, quality cheese and topped with a pile of roasted poblano strips; it was enough to fill four tortillas, with some leftover for the tacos. Definitely order a chile relleno, a large, picadillo-stuffed, and lightly battered jalapeño bomb that ignites the taste buds. Super casual, good prices, great food, and fairly quick service. El Taquito is a keeper.

BY VIRGINIA B. WOOD

August has always been a slow month with the heat usually on blast furnace settings, crops withering in the fields, and everyone who can afford it making a final pilgrimage to the mountains or the shore. But this summer, 100-degree days have been scarce, we've had some rain, farmers' market stalls are still abundant, and some restaurants and food trucks could make an August debut. For example, La Barbecue finishes its residence at East Sixth and Waller this Sunday and reopens in its new space at the GoodLife Food Park (902 E. Cesar Chavez) on Wednesday, Aug. 6. What with preparing for the move and making a mid-July trip to Charleston for a South Carolina vs. Texas BBQ Invitational, pit boss John Lewis hasn't had time to build a second smoker for the new spot and is actively looking for someone capable of building one to his specifications.

Speaking of barbecue, fourth-generation Lockhart pit boss Barrett Black says the family expects to have the new Black's Barbecue (3110 Guadalupe) retail outlet open in August and is still on the lookout for the perfect parking spot for the Black's food truck.

After some friends and family trial runs this weekend, Mark Avalos says we can look for Slab BBQ (9012 Research) to be open to the public next week.

Proprietor Jazmin Nunez reports that she has closed Casa Colombia (1614 E. Seventh) in anticipation of the opening of her newly built location at 2409 E. Seventh, where the restaurant will have more space and a full bar when it opens in September.

The signs are up and contractors are working hard to complete the interiors of both Sugar Mama's Bakeshop East and Dai Due Butcher Shop and Supper Club at 2406 Manor Rd. for their much-anticipated August openings.

Meanwhile, chef Michael Fojtasek is cautiously optimistic that Olamaie (1610 San Antonio St.) will be open in September.

Jessica Maher and Todd Duplechan celebrate the grand opening of Métier Cook's Supply (1805 S. First) this Sunday, Aug. 3. The store is stocked with distinctive cooking tools and books, and will be open Wednesday through Monday, 11am-7pm.

Many folks were saddened recently when Texas Saké Co. founder Yoed Anis sent out an email announcing the closing of his young company. The good news is, a group of his customers who are about to open a brewery decided to buy Texas Saké. When Adam Blumenshein, Tim Klatt, and Hank Legere open Strange Land Brewery (Capital of Texas Hwy. & Bee Caves Rd.) in Westlake Hills this fall, Texas Saké will be a separate entity under their company umbrella, with Yoed Anis as a part owner.

Organizers of Fun Fun Fun Fest are currently seeking applications for vendors to provide food that is “healthy, progressive, and tasty” for the November festival. For complete details and applications, go to www.funfunfunfest.com/vendors through Aug. 15.

Another August debut of note: Boomerang's Pies will open in the North End Zone Food Court at DKR Texas Memorial Stadium in time for the return of the fall football season. Co-owner Brian Keffer says, “Pies are the handheld food item of choice at soccer games in Australia, and we're excited for Texans to learn what great stadium food they are.” Once they are open, Boomerang's will be serving from 8am-6pm Monday through Friday and on game days.

Local couple spins traditional kimchi

BY JESSI CAPE

Austin's newest obsession, kimchi, has been generations in the making. "It's time. Austin's ready. Fermentation isn't going away," says Abby Lunde, co-owner of Oh Kimchi Austin with husband Duane. Judging by their soaring success, we think they are on to something. Kimchi is an edible record of human culture, with highly honored personal flavors. Lunde says it even has the power to save lives.

Kimchi is primarily eaten as a side dish, or banchan, consisting of some form of fermented vegetables. It originated as early as the first century, but took its current form in the 1700s when New World trading opened up spice channels. Korea's national dish is typically made with napa cabbage, fish sauce, and seasonings. The taste is spicy and sour, with a hint of sweetness from the sugar used to feed the probiotics. But tradition aside, kimchi is a rebellious little creature. Its endless quirks and its intense flavor are dependent on the ingredients and, well, its personality.

The intensity can make kimchi a hard sell, but Lunde hopes to change minds. "Duane didn't love the kimchi when we started doing this, but he loved the cucumbers, and then he got addicted to the probiotics," says Lunde. "We're like probiotic drug dealers." She says kimchi boasts four times the amount of probiotics found in Greek yogurt, and Health magazine included it in their top five healthiest foods in the world. Even First Lady Michelle Obama is a fan.

Kimchi is delicious on its own, but it happens to be incredible when paired. The Oh

Kimchi website is full of recipes for sandwiches, soups, and pancakes. Abby also recommends combining kimchi with breakfast tacos or a grilled cheese or quesadilla and using the cucumbers on burgers or pulled pork. The leftover juice can make Bloody Marys or micheladas. Many swear that drinking the juice before bed will help prevent hangovers.

Currently, Lunde's kimchi compound offers a base menu of around five varieties, but they mix it up seasonally. For $10 per jar, the options include traditional (with napa and fish sauce), vegan/paleo (no fish sauce, with bananas replacing the sugar), cucumber, Western cabbage (a great bridge between sauerkraut and kimchi), plus varieties with crunchy daikon, Korean/Alpine turnip, mustard greens, and japchae noodles. They also create a mool kimchi – or water kimchi – with slices of daikon, green onions, napa, and carrots floating in probiotic juice. Lunde says, "The liquid is a kind of cold soup that you can drink. It settles your stomach and your digestion."

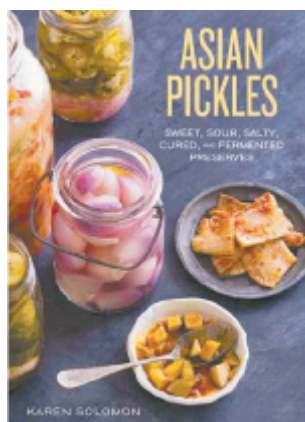

The Oh Kimchi menu is based on home-style, traditional recipes from Abby's mother, Jenny Long, and namesake matriarch Grandma Oh. Growing up in Louisiana, but spending much time in the countryside outside of Seoul with her family, Abby learned the tradition from the women. She says the recipes are "really a lost art form ... because it's been passed down from generation to generation and kids nowadays are so Americanized. They're just not really interested in learning to make kimchi anymore." Her mother, in fact, "was very Americanized when she first came here After a while she started watching a lot of Korean soap operas again and kind of got reintroduced to her own culture."

After the birth of their daughter, Duane and Abby's collective lightbulb went off while working at Johnson's Backyard Garden. The large bounty of cucumbers being composted last summer inspired the couple to start making batches at home for loved ones. Almost immediately after they began peddling their wares at farmers' markets, they were selling out.

They still source locally and seasonally as often as possible, but in Korea, kimchi is

by Karen Solomon, Ten Speed Press, 208pp., $19.99

It's worth reiterating Abby Lunde's sentiment that everyone interested in making kimchi ought to try. Enter Karen Solomon's guide: an entire book dedicated to making the addictive flavors of Asian pickles seem doable. Broken into geographically-based chapters – Japan, Korea, China, India, and southeast Asia – this book provides an overview of the regional specialties and a very user-friendly approach to replicating favorites at home. Her writing is engaging and well-researched, the recipes clear and concise with vivid accompanying photographs. Particularly helpful is Solomon's use of fairly standard kitchen equipment and (mostly) easy-to-acquire ingredients.

Solomon's seven kimchi recipes, both fresh and fermented, are simple and appealing: whole leaf, cubed radish, squid, rolled mustard green, stuffed cucumber, summer radish, and a water kimchi. Other intriguing recipes: from China, the chile black bean oil; from the Philippines, banana ketchup; from Vietnam, fermented "cock" sauce; from India, apples in mustard with mint.

My garden had a surplus of jalapeños, so I tried her recipe for pickled chiles with lime, or prik dong nam som, a common Thai tabletop accompaniment. Refreshingly, the time frame is only one day and requires only seven standard ingredients – including my harvested loot. The recipe did not require a trip to the store ... or cooking, or canning, or any prep outside of cutting the produce. The result: crisp, twangy sliced peppers and pretty purple red onions in a fiery brine – perfect for spooning onto everything I eat. – J.C.

made with what's available. "My family was really poor ... so they would forage for a lot of vegetables, and they just kind of made it work with whatever was available. My mom eats a lot of weeds. She goes out on walks and will find things ... start harvesting them, and take them home to transplant them in her garden. She's started this whole collection of Korean weeds."

That adaptability is part of the charm. "For Koreans, kimchi is a signature on a paper ... or like a business card. You could have 10 different people with the exact same ingredients and the exact same measurements, but just the way they mix it, and their own personality going into the kimchi, flavors it," says Lunde. Even a slight variation (ripeness of vegetable, different source of fish sauce, etc.) changes the batch, so adhering to a strict recipe is impossible. "All of our batches are made by hand, and there's no recipe for it. I just taste every batch, and when it tastes right, it goes out," says Lunde. "My mom told me [that it's] because everybody carries bacteria and enzymes on the skin. So when you put your hands into the kimchi, it flavors the kimchi with you."

It's been hard work bringing a cultural phenomenon to Austin, but Oh Kimchi's whirlwind is only beginning. Oh Kimchi's territory has recently expanded to include San Antonio, Waco, and Dallas. In mid-July, Oh Kimchi partnered with Crazy Korean Shopping to make the jars available for shipping nationwide. They just signed on with the local Whole Foods branches, and will go regional – almost 40 stores – by the end of the year. As if that wasn't enough, they're also crunching numbers to bring kimchi to schools, writing a cookbook, and planning a grab-and-go restaurant – with Long at the kitchen's helm. Referencing a favorite book, The Alchemist, Duane says, "We believe in manifesting our own destiny ... and here we are less than a year later."

As for that life-saving story? "When [my mom] was a kid," says Lunde, "there were nine brothers and sisters, and they lived in an old house. In Korea they would heat the floor with pipes and a coal furnace. They got carbon monoxide poisoning in the middle of the night, in winter, and all the kids were unconscious. My grandma figures out what's going on and she drags all the kids out into the snow, digs up this pot of mool kimchi from underground, and starts ladling them the broth. All of them come back to life because of the enzymes and probiotics in it. ... We wouldn't be here if it weren't for kimchi."

FOOD REVIEW

Seventh Wonder

SILO CONFOUNDS WITH INCONSISTENT FARE

It's usually a fair bet that a restaurant is struggling when they employ some sort of gimmick. On a recent weekend visit to the Silo on Seventh, the gimmick came in the form of a rooftop DJ projecting Nineties music videos on the namesake architecture. The only tenuous link to dining was a song from alt-rockers Cake.

It was a shame, because the deck at Silo doesn't really need bells and whistles. It's neutrally outfitted with picnic tables, comfortable benches, and sleek metal chairs – a splash of color provided by the sky. It's a lovely place to be during dusk, surrounded by the twinkle of string lights. Unfortunately, the musical distraction was sometimes needed. Mostly composed of burgers and bar grub, there is ambition in the flavor profiles. And when they hit their mark, Silo sung. Too often, however, the food and drink lacked voice.

Any good rooftop deck deserves equally compelling cocktails. The cucumber margaritas ($8) were described as "traditional rocks margaritas with Effen cucumber vodka," although we aren't sure which tradition forsakes the earthy kick of tequila. The cucumber came in clearly, a nice astringent touch, but it was lost in what tasted like sweet-and-sour mix. The server advised that the drink was solely comprised of spirit, lime, and simple syrup, but it is difficult to imagine lime juice being so cloying. The Kentucky Mule ($8), however, was sure in its balancing act. Here ginger's snap elevated the honey of bourbon, making us wonder why we wasted so many years on Moscow.

The appetizers were equally uneven. Fried green tomatillos ($5) were served with a verdant jalapeño ranch. Unfortunately, the tempura batter, while delicately puffed on the outside, needed a little more time in the deep-fryer to rid the dish of inside pastiness. The tomatillos themselves were nicely tart but lacked the textural complexity that makes fried green tomatoes a Southern classic. The deep-fried deviled eggs ($6.50) fared better, although again the batter (more tempura) was slightly undercooked. While the eggs were church social regulation, the airy crust gave the density a lift. The accompanying chipotle ranch lent a little smolder. The kitchen's forte was revealed on a second visit. Buffalo wings may have now attained pizza-delivery ubiquity, but they are difficult to get just right. Silo's wings ($8.50) are fried just enough to seal in the juices, sparingly coated in an infused sauce. The dressing was chockablock with bleu cheese.

The burger menu, mostly named for nearby streets, boasted variety and inventiveness. On paper, the Navasota ($10.95) seemed like a sure bet. The ingredients are an honor roll of Southwestern flavors – grilled avocado and serranos, tomatillo, cilantro, and chipotle adobo, theoretically calmed by mayo and muenster cheese. But on the first visit, the adobo sauce made all the other toppings moot. A lighter touch would have chastened adobo's diva tendencies. That issue was corrected on the second go-round. Moderately used, the sauce blended with the pork patty's succulence. The tomatillo twang alas had its moment.

If the Navasota was a flavor bomb, the San Marcos ($9.95) suffered from the opposite problem. It was a battle to find any flavor in the combo of grilled portobello mushroom and vegan cilantro mayo. The vegan bun, though nicely toasted, did not hold up to the vegetable landslide. And the onion strings offered little textural respite. The Chicon ($11.95) was a must-try for its audacity. Its everything-but-the-kitchen-sink approach includes ground beef, white Cheddar, grilled onion and pineapple, pickled beets, a fried egg, and chili mayo – all Dagwood-piled on a kaiser roll. Surprisingly, it all melded into a cohesive whole. Still, it needed a little oomph, corrected by a light sprinkle of salt. The side of sweet potato tots ($1.95) also brought out the burger's less assertive ingredients.

It's worth noting that Silo's successes all occurred on the second visit. One wonders if the staff is still finding its stride (admittedly tough when the waitstaff has to scurry about multiple levels). Ultimately, DJs aren't needed if Silo keeps their standards in check. To excel in the cluttered Eastside dining scene, the music will need to come out of the kitchen.

Billy Joe Shaver baptized
in Barton Springs, 2012

Long in the Tooth

When it comes to writing a real-deal country song, few roll up the ol' denim sleeves and crank out gold like Billy Joe Shaver, the poet laureate of the outlaw ilk whose work has been recorded by Elvis Presley, Bob Dylan, Johnny Cash, and Willie Nelson. Long in the Tooth, his first studio effort in six years, finds Shaver as funny, defiant, and wise as ever.

Austin Chronicle: What makes a great song. Is there a magic ingredient?

Billy Joe Shaver: It's truth and saying it in as few words as you possibly can to the point where an idiot like me can understand it. You've gotta start at the bottom. When I have trouble with a song, I'll lay it out on the table and visualize it as a letter to someone I care about. Then I'll realize what I want to say.

AC: What's the best song there's ever been?

BJS: That'd be "Amazing Grace," I don't think there's any doubt about it, but coming up in second would be "Crazy" by Willie Nelson.

AC: Did it bother you that two songs you wrote for your new album came out on Willie's new album first?

BJS: Man, shit, that don't bother me none! I can always write another song. I've never had that ... what do you call it? "Writer's block" or whatever. I texted Willie that line, "It's hard to be an outlaw who ain't wanted anymore," and he said, "Write that." I wrote that thing so dang fast it'd make your head spin because I was scared he'd write it first.

AC: Did you write better on speed or on God?

BJS: The speed just helped me stay up so I could have more fun, but I figure it knocked a whole bunch of years off my writing and my friendships. I don't think God helps anybody write songs, except maybe "I'm Just an Old Chunk of Coal." I wrote that right when I was born again and it just came down through me.

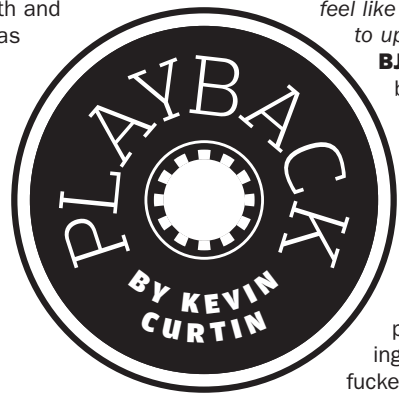

AC: In "Long in the Tooth," you sing, "I live up to all those stories been told." Do you feel like you have a reputation to uphold?

BJS: Half the stories are a blown-up bunch of bullshit. One time these two guys tried to roll me in the alley behind the old Ryman in Nashville and I whooped 'em and left 'em lying there. By the time I'd walked to the other end of town, people were already saying I'd beat up five guys, fucked 'em up so bad, kicked a hole in their damn car – all kinda crazy shit! The more I tried to deny it, the worse it got.

And there's a guy in Nashville that goes around tellin' people he's me! That don't help me none either. Making out with girls and writing hot checks. Lot of people call me up and say, "Hey man, you're really cookin' tonight!" I always tell 'em, "Look at his hand and see if he's got anything missing." If he went and chopped his fingers off to be like me, he's a pretty dedicated motherfucker!

Billy Joe Shaver performs at Waterloo Records Tuesday at 5pm, free.

LAST CALL AT THE TRIPLE CROWN

Ask Scott H. Biram what venue he considers his home and he'll direct you to a small, smoky San Marcos dive bar with music every night. He played the Triple Crown three times the week it opened in November 1996. First to an empty room as he tested out the stage, then with his punk band the Thangs, and finally making his solo debut as "Lonesome Scott Biram."

"The Triple Crown is where I lost my nervousness about performing because I did it so often," says Austin's country/metal/blues one-man band. "Later it became my guinea pig place, where I could try new things and play extra-long sets."

Biram's Saturday night performance will be his last stand at the original Triple Crown location.

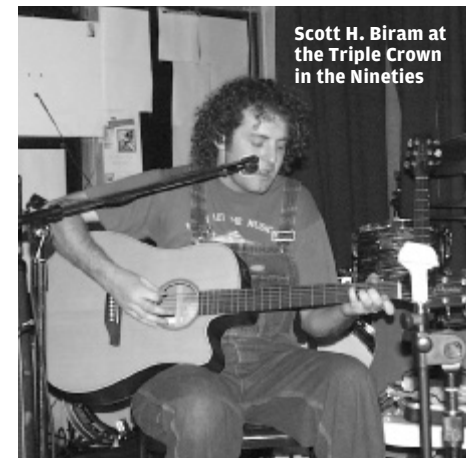

"It's likely we'll sell our property at the end of the year and relocate to a bigger, better spot in 2015," acknowledged Triple Crown partner and booker Eric Shaw. "We don't have a new location in mind, but we're looking for something that's walking or biking distance from Downtown."

The relocation process will likely end Triple Crown's epic streak of hosting live music every night since 1997. During that time they've provided a reliable nearby market for Austin acts like Dale Watson, Grupo Fantasma, Honky, and, more recently, bands like Mr. Lewis & the Funeral 5 and Otis the Destroyer.

For Troy Wayne Delco of Triple Crown favorites the Beaumonts, it's all about the clientele.

"It's always full of intoxicated women, some of them don't have kids, and it's the first place I ever saw a one-legged man get in a fight with a woman in a wheelchair," he confirmed.

WEEKENDER

"Playback" highlights from last weekend:

THURSDAY: "Am I completely surrounded by balloons right now or is Austin being kind of lazy?" So inquired slide guitar jester Bob Log III one minute after tossing a bag of uninflated balloons into the audience inside Mohawk. The one-man band's inability to see through his helmet's visor added an element of danger to his antics, which included surfing the crowd in a rubber raft.

FRIDAY: A leaner version of OBN III's debuted at Beerland with caustic frontman Orville Neely handling guitar duties. Performing a set of unreleased material before blasting into "No Time for the Blues," "Rockin' Spins," and "Worries" off recent LP Third Time to Harm, the band sounded bigger, better, tighter, though the element of mayhem was all but muted.

Half Notes

► Future Folk, the bizarre musical comedy duo of Nils d'Aulaire (General Trius) and Jay Klaitz (The Mighty Kevin) that performs intergalactic roots music while dressed in alien military uniforms, hits the Alamo Drafthouse Ritz next Thursday for a performance and screening of The History of Future Folk. The flick follows Hondonian hero General Trius, who's sent to Earth to eradicate civilization, but instead discovers music and starts a bluegrass group. Aug. 7, 7pm. Free with RSVP at www.do512.com.

► White Denim pops its Austin City Limits cherry on Monday with a taping at the Moody Theater. The increasingly proggy guitar rock quartet arrives as the first local act to tape a solo performance for the national PBS show's 40th season. "I love their recent record [Corsicana Lemonade], SATURDAY: Before a loincloth-clad free jazz trio took the stage at the Lost Well, the bar was nearly leveled by the Sunn amp assault of Bridge Farmers, whose heavy-lidded sludge heaviosity veers psychedelic with Tyler Hautala's ethereal guitar leads and echo chamber screaming.

SUNDAY: A solo career was imminent for Sons of Fathers expat Paul Cauthen, but whether it would live up to the standard of his collaboration with David Beck was less certain. Cauthen impressed at the Saxon Pub on Sunday with radio-quality pop hooks such as earworm "Marfa Lights" and the eyebrow-raising "Womanizer," but it was his young, indie-rock-leaning backing band, led by inventive guitarist Wes Maxwell, that prompted mid-song applause.

and all signs just point to now being the right time," said ACL Executive Producer Terry Lickona. Today, Thursday, at noon is the deadline to enter the ticket giveaway at www.acltv.com.

► Midnight Masses, featuring ... Trail of Dead's Autry Fulbright and Jason Reece, has released its debut full-length, Departures. "The general theme is loss, whether it be life, relationships, or a former sense of one's self," outlined Fulbright, who founded the gothic pop/rock project in 2008 in the wake of his father's sudden passing. The group's original producer, TV on the Radio's Gerard Smith, also passed in 2011. Midnight Masses survives for a national headlining tour kicking off next Thursday at Holy Mountain.

Everything Hits at Once

Spoon's other half, Jim Eno

BY CHASE HOFFBERGER

Jim Eno wanted to start a band with me once.

Last July, inside Mohawk after a set by Austin/Oxford act Frenchbraid – a project he recorded at his home studio – the Spoon drummer took interest in the following band, which had brought me there. He relished the fact that the singer makes my coffee at an area hang.

“Does he leave room for cream?” wondered Eno aloud.

Before he can muster his own rim shot, he’s on it, repeating the phrase.

“Room for Cream! Let’s use it,” he tells me. “Let’s make that our band name!”

He looks around and grabs guitar buddy Zach Ernst. Seems we’re a trio and I’ve got to learn bass.

Two months later, my prospective band-mate’s onstage at Utopia Fest, lending percussion to !!! as they shake loose their headlining set. Eno produced the California dance sextet’s 2013 breakout Thr!!!er at Public Hi-Fi. In jeans and a black rain jacket, the drummer bangs bongos for half the set, full smile unwavering.

“I’m not sure they’ll let me play with them anymore,” he says almost a year later back at his studio. “Too much fun. Think I might have worn out my welcome.”

Transference

Touring ceased on Spoon’s Transference in 2010, after which live performances continued at a trickle. Only two band sightings occurred in 2011, which doubled the following year. In 2013, for the first time in Eno’s last two decades, Austin’s most successful indie act didn’t play a single show.

That’s because Eno’s co-pilot was otherwise occupied. Spoon’s blond bard, Britt Daniel, was having Divine Fits, and who could blame him? By that juncture, the pair had been booked for 20 years.

Double-booked in Eno’s case. Besides Spoon, the drummer/producer’s adult life has been split between microchip design and the production and eventual release of countless collections of music for the next wave of independent talent. Now 48, he arrived from Houston in 1990 for a job with Compaq, worked there for two years before shipping here for good with Motorola. He met Daniel at a 1993 recording session and joined his band the Alien Beats directly. The pair then disbanded the Beats, flipped Daniel from bass to guitar, and started Spoon with two others.

Seven LPs and three EPs followed. The two most recent full-lengths, 2007’s Ga Ga Ga Ga Ga and 2010’s Transference, hit the Top 10. Certain songs – “Car Radio,” “The Way We Get By,” “I Turn My Camera On,” “The Underdog” – became ubiquitous. There’s been jet-setting, international tours, and all festivals. No one refutes the songwriting genius of Britt Daniel.

“I Saw the Light”: Jim Eno at his Public Hi-Fi Studio in Tarrytown

TODD V. WOLFSON

Jim Eno, meanwhile, continued to grind, working his day job before loading in for late sets at small local nightclubs. He married, had a daughter, divorced. The garage of a big house he bought in Tarrytown in 1998 became a one-room studio. Locals including Sally Crewe, Those Peabodys, Eliza Wren, and the Rite Flyers loaded in, while Spoon bore Girls Can Tell (2001), Kill the Moonlight (2002), and Gimme Fiction (2005) there.

Spoon tours scheduled around Eno’s vacations and leave of absence policies. He considered quitting the tech sector, and remembered Reivers linchpin John Croslin saying, “It’ll be black-and-white when that time comes.” Eno’s boss called him one day late in 2006 and told him he was folding his company, so producing full-time began immediately.

“I wasn’t even thinking about how long or what I would do while Britt was busy,” says Eno. “I had already booked four months of projects when he told me.”

Dormarion

High ceilings, sunlight, comfy couches: The makeshift, one-room Public Hi-Fi has been replaced by a two-story, three-room compound built in 2006.

“That’s earth and plaster in certain places,” points out Eno. “It goes on the inside of straw-bale houses. If you look, there’s no Sheetrock exposed. Sheetrock sounds pingy and high-end.”

Public Hi-Fi has been built for recording comfort. Amps line the front room, synthesizers amass upstairs, and the

“[Jim] funded the Spoon operation a couple of times,” emails Britt Daniel. “First during A Series of Sneaks and then by getting his studio in the early 2000s. I don’t know how we would have made Girls Can Tell or Kill the Moonlight otherwise.”

In fact, the timing proved perfect. That summer, Spoon began work on Ga Ga Ga Ga Ga, which hit the following July. Tour, return, produce Black Joe Lewis, John Vanderslice, Voxtro, and Via Audio. Daniel wrote Transference, Spoon booked time at Public Hi-Fi, and Eno toured that one for nearly a year.

“We all needed a break,” admits Eno today.

A few months later, Daniel began writing Divine Fits songs with Dan Boeckner.

entryway to the kitchen overlooks the cutting room. A floor-to-ceiling window separates the recording space and control room.

“I did a lot of research,” nods my tour guide. “I wanted good sight lines. I wanted windows. Once you’re in a studio for two weeks without windows, you realize how important they can be.”

Comfort’s proved beneficial to both megastars who’ve booked the space – Justin Timberlake, Lady Gaga, Arcade Fire – as well as the truly independent.

“You walk in the door, and ‘Holy shit!’” exclaims Michael Lerner, the man behind Seattle’s Telekinesis. “It’s every plug-in that you have, in real-life form. It’s so inviting. You’re kind of blown away.”

Lerner made his first trek to Eno’s studio five years ago, after his band, signed to indie powerhouse Merge Records (longtime home to Spoon), played Mohawk.

“He was like: ‘Do you want to come back to my studio and have a dance party?’” remembers Lerner.

Both of them and the band listened to Michael Jackson until 5am. Lerner returned to Austin three years later to record his third album, Dormarion, named after the street Eno lives on. This past winter, Austin’s Dana Falconberry walked into Public Hi-Fi to record an album, her as-yet-unreleased fourth, and walked out with two singles, “Palmless” and “Seven Hills,” that bore an entirely new, electronic aesthetic.

“I didn’t know what to do with it,” admits the indie rock singer of the former, a raw demo that’s become a staple on KUTX. “Jim took it upon himself to take it in a direction I wouldn’t have come up with naturally.”

Eno then used the two tracks for a 12-inch release on Public Hi-Fi Records, a micro-label he founded last April so he could put out a Dupree session.

“I had the guys in there recording for my solo record,” says Hammond B-3 organ grinder Mike Flanigin. “We had some time, so we decided to play. Jim ran a 2-track tape on the Dupree stuff – unbeknownst to me.”

April’s Nuestro Camino condensed three hours of instrumentals into a single LP.

“He mixed everything on the fly,” explains Flanigin. “With 2-track tape, that’s all you get. He loved what we’d done, so he said, ‘What about me starting a label and putting this out?’ He said he wanted to start a label for things that wouldn’t be heard otherwise.”

In November, Eno followed Dupree with a release from Scandinavian singer Sondre Lerche.

“It’s one thing to say that,” adds Flanigin. “It’s another to drop $12,000 on an unknown band that plays Sunday nights in Austin.”

They Want My Soul

Life double-booked again for Eno toward the end of 2012. That’s when Daniel, busy with Boeckner, rang.

“He was like: ‘Hey, if the band wants to get together and work on anything, send it to me. Maybe I’ll use it,’” says Eno.

With bassist Rob Pope busy in Brooklyn opening a bar, Dallas-bound guitarist Eric Harvey tripped down the highway into Public Hi-Fi to riff with Eno. The two came up with the framework for “Outlier,” the sixth song on Spoon’s eighth album, They Want My Soul, out Aug. 5 on Loma Vista, a newish L.A. imprint the band signed to after five LPs with Merge. The first Spoon song initially conceived without assistance from Daniel, the cut builds over a rushing beat.

Fridmann, the rest of They Want My Soul came together more traditionally. Daniel churned out material like the hit factory he is. The band – now with Divine Fits multi-instrumentalist Alex Fischel – bludgeoned on “Rainy Taxi,” experiment with synthesizers on “Outlier,” and pop through the title track. “Let Me Be Mine” sounds like late-era Kill the Moonlight. Daniel says “New York Kiss” was actually written for Gimme Fiction.

“My girlfriend said, ‘This [new album] combines the best elements of every Spoon record,’” offers Eno. “That’s how I feel about it, too. It’s got the toughness of ‘Written in Reverse’ and melancholy of ‘Everything Hits at Once.’ You have ‘Rent I Pay’ and ‘Inside Out’ – all these pieces – but it’s bigger than that.”

This week, Spoon sets off for Chicago to begin a 14-week tour of the U.S. and Europe, swinging through town for the Austin City Limits Music Festival in October before concluding Nov. 7 at the 02 Shepherd’s Bush Empire in London. Another tour will likely follow. Daniel was adamant about his renewed energy for Spoon when we spoke in advance of last year’s ACL Fest, repeatedly voicing his excitement about reconvening the group.

“[Jim] funded the Spoon operation a couple of times,” emails Daniel when queried about his partner in the group. “First during A Series of Sneaks and then by getting his studio in the early 2000s. I don’t know how we would have made Girls Can Tell or Kill the Moonlight otherwise.

“Jim’s a great drummer who never forgets the basics of what really moves people,” writes Daniel. “I’ve always admired how Jim’s such a can-do guy. He decides he wants something or wants to do something or make something, and then he goes and does it.” ■

They Want My Soul* (Loma Vista Recordings)

Spoon needed a hiatus. Daunted by the unprecedented commercial success that accompanied 2007 career milestone Ga Ga Ga Ga Ga, the band threw longtime producer Mike McCarthy out with the bathwater for 2010’s Transference, a work of subtle desperation that lacked focus and clarity. Chalk it up to time and distance, or the cathartic release afforded frontman Britt Daniel in underrated side project Divine Fits, but They Want My Soul returns Spoon to rare form. At its best, the local quintet’s eighth LP pulls from every corner of its deep catalog: Opener “Rent I Pay” calls back to the scrappy charm of 2002’s Kill the Moonlight; the title track could slot right into Gimme Fiction; “New York Kiss” bears the broadband appeal of Ga Ga Ga Ga Ga; and “Rainy Taxi” comes off like a return trip from “The Mystery Zone,” with Jim Eno holding down a treadmill beat (incline 1.5) for a masterful drama of suspended tension. Credit producer Dave Fridmann (Flaming Lips, Mercury Rev) for helping reel it all in, especially “Knock Knock Knock,” which takes all of the right cues from Bowie – acoustic guitar upfront, hot-wired guitar sparks, space-oddy vocals – without overplaying its hand, and bruised Ann-Margret cover “I Just Don’t Understand.” One also gets the sense that Daniel’s starting to let his guard down somewhat as a songwriter, and for the better. “Inside Out” is simply stunning, a dream sequence with washed-out keys and the frontman softly pleading at one point, “Break out of character for me.” That’s topped only by “Do You,” which manages to hit every Spoon hallmark in one breakout track. Welcome back.

Wasted Years (Vice)

Early into Wasted Years' 16 songs in 23 minutes, Keith Morris snarls, "Angry for the rest of your life/ There's no easy escape." That's every note decimated by the L.A. foursome during five years of hardcore protest. Behind the nearly 60-year-old dynamo at the mic, frothing at the mouth since founding stints in Black Flag and Circle Jerks, an all-star ensemble goes Off!: guitarist/producer Dimitri Coats (Burning Brides), bassist Steven McDonald (Redd Kross), and drum locomotive Mario Rubalcaba (Rocket From the Crypt, Earthless). Analog tape thickens America's best punk band into an upward curve on its third LP, anthems "All I Can Grab" and "Void You Out" unleashing the most brutal riff-rock this side of Motörhead. Morris' lyrical fury hones a razor's edge of fast-flying images, including "It Didn't Matter to Me," the hardest-rocking AA confession ever written: "Drown out/ Fall down plastered/ Toss off two fifths after stealing booze from a secret place/ My brain's on mind erase." Summation of America's political landscape ("Void You Out"): "Parasite cowards/ Take over the host/ Lunatic fringe/ Will be a ghost." Conviction rocks like murder. (Off! detonates at Mohawk Saturday, August 9.)

The Both (Superego)

Incompatible on paper, Aimee Mann and Ted Leo once again accomplish that which they've spent respective careers proving: everyone wrong. A New Wave survivor via Boston's 'Til Tuesday ("Voices Carry"), Mann, 53, carried rock over into a Nineties solo career whose wistfulness engendered critical and popular appeal. Leo, 43, went the hardcore NYC route during that same period, but not without a lyrical and melodic streak (Hearts of Oak). Together, those strengths inform this eponymous dance, subsuming just enough to give this debut the feel of a band with many facets. Leo brings heavy guitar fuzz on "Milwaukee," a tune that might seem out of place on one of Mann's records. Alternatively "You Can't Help Me Now" could've been lifted from the Magnolia soundtrack, arguably Mann's biggest solo success. Ardent rendering of Thin Lizzy's "Honesty Is No Excuse" finds the pair on just the right amount of middle ground. All told, The Both brings refreshing energy to a pair of catalogs whose unlikely intersection succeeds superbly. (The Both congregate at Mohawk Wednesday, August 13.)

Lana Del Rey Ultraviolence (Interscope)

For every part "idiot" that her image projects – the put-on pout, that doubtful persona – Lana Del Rey's equal parts savant. The dichotomy makes songstress Elizabeth Grant hard to peg. Ultraviolence marks the Angeleno's third album in four years, produced by the Black Keys' Dan Auerbach into dark, lush gloom-pop. The heiress-turned-songwriter spins tragic tales that further an intrigue somehow only mounting, yet they're just dubious enough to keep any artistic credibility at a cautious arm's length and thus perpetuate her core polarity. A recovering alcoholic since 15, Del Rey, now 29, isn't afraid to cannonball into the dark and taboo, warningly forthright from the get-go. Opener "Cruel World" acknowledges the controversy: "Everybody knows that I'm a mess, I'm crazy." In "Sad Girl," she recounts "being a mistress on the side," while the tongue-in-cheek "Fucked My Way to the Top" speaks for itself. Ultimately, it's this brazenness that makes Lana Del Rey appear humanly vulnerable, and more importantly, creatively viable.

Crosby, Stills, Nash & Young CSNY 1974 (Atlantic/Rhino)

Woodstock be damned. Peace, love, and understanding sprouted in January 1967 during San Francisco's Human Be-In, peaked three summers later at Max Yasgur's 600 acres in upstate New York, and died that December (1969) at the hands of the Hells Angels securing Altamont Speedway for the Rolling Stones. Nixon, Vietnam, and Watergate won out. Crosby, Stills, Nash & Young performed at both Woodstock and Altamont, a beacon of folk idealism at the former, and harbinger of ego and excess by the latter. Not having toured since 1970, the harmony constant quartet reunited for the stadiums cash-grab now exhumed on the 3-CD/1-DVD CSNY 1974, pieced together from 10 shows out of 31. "It was the Never Ending Tour that went on and on and on," according to tour manager Chris O'Dell in the documentary-worthy mini-book of liner notes. "The most dysfunctional gathering of egos in the history of rock & roll." In 2012 autobiography Waging Heavy Peace, Neil Young says of the final show at Wembley, "We were either too high or just no good. I am saying too high. I know we were really good at our best." Set producer Graham Nash excavates the latter brilliantly, stitching together a three-plus-hour tour de force of ragged but right Seventies rage, rife with ample warhorses ("Love the One You're With," "Wooden Ships"), corrosive protests ("Almost Cut My Hair," "Ohio"), irascible grit (the producer's "Grave Concern," Stills' "Johnny's Garden"), and Young's heart-breaking spine of songs ("Helpless," "On the Beach"), including five previously unreleased. The craggy acoustic set sandwiched between electric workouts (metallic "Black Queen") counts off the hits ("Only Love Can Break Your Heart," "Guinevere," "Teach Your Children"), never better than Nash's breathtaking piano rendition of "Our House" at Wembley. Glimpse it on the rather short-shift, bootleg quality 40-minute DVD, where the foursome's harmonies cut through the cynicism of the times like a dove finally vanquishing the hawk.

Nils Lofgren Face the Music (Fantasy)

Journeyman defines decades of rock & roll service by Nils Lofgren but to the detriment of his bottomless catalog. The Chicago-born guitarist, who emerged from the D.C. scene in the late Sixties, remains best known for three decades' worth of service to Bruce Springsteen's E Street Band, but don't forget key contributions to Neil Young and Ringo Starr ensembles. You won't with the 9-CD/1-DVD of Face the Music, meticulously compiling fan favorites, deep cuts, rarities, and alternate versions from that 40 years' worth of work. There's hardly a bad track in the bunch. A mainstream rocker from a time when that meant something, both as a solo artist and with his breakout band Grin, Lofgren never bothered with genres or trends, outside of the same Eighties-era fripperies that afflicted nearly everyone. He writes strong melodies, sings them with conviction, and demonstrates six-string virtuosity with a masterful mix of innate skill and accessibility. This self-curated and annotated set hits his obvious highlights ("Back It Up," "Valentine," "No Mercy"), but the gems crop up as generously as the lengthy track list. Anthems ("Steal Away," "Secrets in the Street"), pop rocks ("Confident Girl," "Frankie Hang On"), obscure soundtracks (Every Breath), a whole disc of Grin highlights, and tunes lovely ("Sad Walk"), rollicking ("Walkin' Nerve"), and disco-bent ("I Came to Dance") – the list literally goes on and on. Though too many for one sitting, the quality of the songs justifies the space allotted to them. There's a modesty to Lofgren's work, as if he's confident in his abilities but feels no need to prove it. While that likely prevented him from being a full-fledged "rock star," it allowed Nils Lofgren, 63, the freedom to make consistently memorable music in an unforgiving industry.

Answer Code Request Code (Ostgut Ton)

Berlin techno has become too clean for comfort. The city absorbs styles like Manifest Destiny melts ethnicities, churning fragments until nothing exists but bleached teeth. Answer Code Request's first LP lacquers another unblemished Berlin affair, the cleanliness of Code scuttling with a fecund attention to detail. If the German capital is to contemporary techno what orthodontics are to teeth, Code wafts the airy nausea after a root canal. As ACR, Patrick Gräser contorts across the genre's flux, sporing like lichen against uninhabited perimeters of form. ACR outlines cell walls of amoeba only to vacuum the mass at the core. A chilling weightlessness persists throughout, with translucent tones ping-ponging across crescent borders. Unlike previous 12-inches, Code allows the barren room to echo out. Opening with a hats-off intro to Detroit techno, à la astronaut samples and rich Kepler keys, the mélange percolates with focused intensity. "Odyssey Sequence" creeps by, while "Blue Russian" drizzles with drum 'n' bass swagger. Laboratory techno gurgles pathogens on "Status," and "By the Bay" floats an IDM glider. On second thought, Berlin still holds clout. ★★★

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

by Chuck Shepherd

ROY TOMPKINS

Awesome Thievery: 1) A former city official in Ridgewood, N.J., pleaded guilty in July to stealing nearly 2 million quarters collected from parking meters over the course of two years, with no one noticing. Under a plea deal, Thomas Rica will likely be spared jail time provided he repays half of what he stole. 2) In July, New York City prosecutors accused a former pharmacist at Mount Sinai Beth Israel hospital of stealing nearly 200,000 oxycodone-strength pain pills over five years, despite his increasingly far-fetched explanations. Anthony D'Alessandro even boldly swiped 1,500 pills the day after investigators first challenged him.

MODERN WARFARE

The leader of the devout Sunni jihadist group Islamic State, Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi, making a rare, solemn appearance in July, wore a flashy silver wristwatch that various video analysts described as either a Rolex, an Omega Seafarer, or a feature-laden Saudi Arabian-made timepiece that sells for only about $560. A week earlier, a Syrian anti-government rebel leader was shown in a video exhorting his troops from notes he had made in his Hello Kitty notebook. And a week after that, a shopkeeper in North Waziristan, lamenting the loss of business when local Taliban fighters abruptly left the area, told a BBC reporter that the jihadists obsessively bought Dove soap, Head & Shoulders shampoo, white underwear ("briefs or Y-fronts"), and "Secret Love" and "Blue Lady" perfumes.

THE CONTINUING CRISIS

Clinton Tucker, who is black, sued Benjamin Moore paints in Essex County, N.J., in June for wrongful firing – after, he said, he had tolerated years of workplace racial insults. In fact, Tucker said the company had introduced two new paint shades shortly after he was hired in 2011 – "Tucker Chocolate" and "Clinton Brown," provoking on-the-job ridicule.

The African hippopotamus is not found in South America – except for the estimated 50 or so that, confusingly to natives, roam the Colombian countryside between Bogotá and Medellín. The animals are the progeny of the four smuggled in 30 years ago by cocaine king Pablo Escobar, who generously established a grand, exotic zoo for his neighbors' enjoyment after his drug business took off (and before he was gunned down in 1993). However, as BBC News reported in June, hippo meat is inedible, and without their African natural enemies, they breed with astonishing prolificity – thus creating a "time bomb" for Colombia.

British lawyer Gary Stocker, 30, was headed to the top of the profession with an Oxford education and a six-figure salary – when he decided instead to become a circus' human cannonball. He is now The Great Herrmann in Chaplin's Circus under a 1,400-seat tent in the city of St. Albans. Stocker told the Daily Mail in May, "Being in a circus is what I was destined for," and that "Perhaps I only went to Oxford to please my mum." Chaplin's show tells the story of a failing circus revived by the invention of the first "human cannon."

WAIT - WHAT?

Kimberly Williams, 46, was convicted in April in Will County, Ill., of beating dominatrix Theresa Washington with a baseball bat. Williams conceded to the judge that she had hired Washington, but only because she wanted a "slave" to take pictures of her naked while she did housework. Instead, she said, Washington became aggressive, declared herself a "master" and dragged Williams around by the hair. Furthermore, according to Williams, Washington's transformation happened abruptly after a phone call Washington made to "someone she met on the dating site Christian Mingle."

FIRST-WORLD PROBLEMS

Update: U.S. obesity continues to grow – for pets as well as people – and exercise innovations for humans seem to trickle down to dogs. A July Associated Press report noted that fat Labradors and poodles now have Pilates ("pawlates") and yoga ("doga") and even play "Barko Polo" in the pool, while Morris Animal Inn offers five-day fitness camps for dogs ($249) in Morristown, N.J. (More cats than dogs are overweight, but getting cats to the gym is perhaps beyond human capability.)

THE NEW NORMAL

Since high-rise residents value their privacy, Lisa Pleiss of Seattle said she was frightened on June 22 when she saw a drone hovering outside her 26th-floor window: "You don't expect to be walking around indecent in your apartment and then have this thing potentially recording you." According to police, the drone was legal – helping a developer photograph downtown Seattle – but would not have been if the camera had been pointed at Pleiss' window. (Drones are becoming so widespread that, for instance, the University of South Florida library owns several, for student check-out on certain research projects.)

In June, as Elizabeth Neufeld, 85, was backing her car out of her driveway in Bel Air, Calif., it tipped on a curve and rolled onto its side. Elizabeth was not hurt, but was trapped inside while her husband, Benjamin, 87, got out on his own. As they awaited firefighters, she reportedly handed a cell phone to a passerby so that the Neufelds would have a photograph (which spread across the Internet, with Elizabeth having righted herself in the driver's seat and Benjamin standing sheepishly alongside). (Dr. Elizabeth Neufeld, retired, is one of the world's most prominent genetics researchers, having won numerous awards during stints at the National Institutes of Health, UC-Berkeley, and UCLA.)

LEAST COMPETENT CRIMINALS

Failed to Keep a Low Profile: Jacob Close, 25, wanted after jumping bail in New York on a drug charge, but recently on Bloomsburg (Pa.) University police's radar screen after he was rumored to be in the area, was arrested by the campus cops in June. Close's name and photograph had appeared in the Bloomsburg Press Enterprise's "Your Opinion" feature. He apparently could not resist when a street reporter asked him the newspaper's "question of the week" – whether the Washington Redskins football team should choose another name. (His vitally important opinion? No.)

Day Trips

BY GERALD E. MCLEOD

The Roxton Grocery and Cafe is a family-owned supply station surrounded by scenic rolling hills and cornfields. Roxton is a quiet little town off the beaten path about 15 miles southwest of Paris in northeast Texas.

"It's a great place to grow up," says Michael Bush, the owner of the grocery store along with his wife Michele. Both have lived here most of their lives. Michele worked at the grocery store for nine years before they bought it in 2002.

Established in 1837, Roxton is one of the oldest settlements in Lamar County. The population peaked around 1914 at 1,200, but has held steady near 700 for most of the last 100 years. The surrounding farmland has supported generations of residents.

The grocery store opened in the Forties when the town had two banks, two theatres, and three grocery stores. Today, most of the three-block-long business district is empty. Small signs on the buildings tell of the town's former vitality.

Since the Northeast Texas Trail replaced the railroad tracks through town, the Bushes have supported the 130-mile rails-to-trails project. The recreational trail crosses a three-arch masonry bridge on the northern edge of town.

The Roxton Grocery is open daily from 7am to 8pm, and on Sundays from 9am to 2pm. The cafe serves daily specials as well as burgers and sandwiches for lunch Monday through Saturday, with dinner options Wednesday through Friday from 5 to 8pm.

1,200th in a series. Collect them all. Day Trips, Vol. 2, a book of "Day Trips," is available for $8.95, plus $3.05 for shipping, handling, and tax. Mail to: Day Trips, PO Box 33284, South Austin, TX 78704.

WWE Monday Night RAW

BY RICHARD WHITTAKER

“It happened so fast.” Normally that’s how WWE superstar Seth Rollins’ opponents describe taking his vicious curb stomp finisher. But that’s how Rollins talks about his meteoric rise. It began in November 2012, when wrestling faction the Shield – hard-hitting high flier Rollins, powerhouse Roman Reigns, and crazy brawler Dean Ambrose – smashed their way through the Survivor Series pay-per-view. A month later, the trio dominated at the bloody and brutal TLC: Tables, Ladders, and Chairs, breaking bones and dropping jaws. “We’d just been doing run-ins, and people didn’t know what to expect of us in a full match.”

Seasoned wrestling fans knew what to expect. They’d seen Rollins from his days on the indie circuit, superkicking his way to infamy as the treacherous Tyler Black. Now he’s on the cusp of WWE main-event status, and his biggest adversary may be the WWE’s demanding schedule, with up to 300 nights a year on the road. “For me, the biggest change is the amount of shows we’re doing. There’s talk of ‘Oh, you’ve got to tone down your style,’ but I know my limitations.” Now he carries his big break with him: Last month, he quit the Shield and won a guaranteed WWE World Heavyweight title shot, at a time and place of his choosing. For Rollins, it shows company confidence in his skills. “It’s a real test for how things are going to go,” he said, but he’s looking beyond just the title. “I want to be the greatest of all time, rivaling Sean Michaels, rivaling Ric Flair, rivaling the Rock and John Cena.”

Yet, he still has to get past his former brother beneath the Shield, Ambrose. It’s simple. Rollins has a title shot. Ambrose has promised to wreck his dreams. This is the feud of the year, and Rollins has a message: You ain’t seen nothing yet. “All the expectations are an underestimate of what’s going to happen when we get in the ring together.”

Mon., Aug. 4, 6:30pm. Frank Erwin Center, 1701 Red River, 512/471-7744. $15-95. www.uterwincenter.com/events/2014/www-monday-night-raw.

Soccer Watch

BY NICK BARBARO

The Austin Aztex season came to an end Sunday evening at House Park with a 2-0 loss to Southeast champion the Ocala Stampede. The Aztex had most of the possession, and a 16-12 edge in shots, but Ocala kept their defensive shape and composure, soaked up the Aztex’s pressure, got a great performance from their goalie, and sprung some lethal counterattacks, plus they had a Gambian forward, Karamba Janneh, who was, for this night at least, the best player on the field.

But let’s not dwell – the Aztex had a truly great season: They had an 11-1-2 record, with a PDL-high four players earning all-conference honors (Chuy Cortes, Tony Rocha, Devin Perales, and Kalen Ryden); they set new attendance records for both regular season and playoffs; they saw a number of former players enjoy success in the pro ranks; and they announced the move to USL PRO, plus the expanded ownership team, that in turn enabled the big outdoor World Cup watch party at the Long Center, and the long-awaited biergarten set up outside of House Park on the playoff weekend. Taken altogether, that’s a lot of big steps forward for the third-year franchise, and a good sign for the future of “Austin’s Professional Sports Team.”

With the World Cup over, and now the Aztex season over, there’s still a wealth of soccer on TV this week – some 20 games in all, including key MLS games, plus a variety of exhibition matches involving the big European teams touring the U.S., leading up to the Guinness Cup final (7pm Monday, Aug. 4, Fox Sports 1 and ESPN Deportes) and the MLS All-Star game against Bayern Munich (8:30pm Wed., Aug. 6, ESPN2).

Encouraged by the Austin Aztex’s successful biergarten launch last weekend, University of Michigan officials have announced that they will allow beer sales inside UM’s Big House Saturday night, for the game between Real Madrid and Manchester United. All alcohol – along with purses, often used to secrete alcohol – are normally strictly forbidden at the Big House. The game is expected to break the U.S. attendance record for a soccer game, which is 101,799 at the Rose Bowl during the 1984 Olympics.

Guardians of the Galaxy

D: James Gunn; with Chris Pratt, Zoe Saldana, Dave Bautista, Lee Pace, Karen Gillan, Michael Rooker, Djimon Hounsou, John C. Reilly, Benicio Del Toro, Glenn Close, Sean Gunn, Peter Serafinowicz; with the voices of Vin Diesel, Bradley Cooper. (PG-13, 120 min.)

Memorable plots – or heck, even coherent ones – have never been a priority of the Marvel Cinematic Universe. They're typically hung on some gobbledygook idea, a meaningless MacGuffin dressed up in a solemn-sounding name – the Aether! the Tesseract! – and this latest Marvel movie is no different. It's literally about chasing a ball around the galaxy. (Sorry – make that "infinity stone.") It's so rudimentary, it's genius.

The opening creaks, but once all the characters are introduced, Guardians of the Galaxy clicks into place. As the wisecracking space outlaw Peter "Starlord" Quill, Chris Pratt takes a page from two iconic Harrison Ford roles – Han Solo and Indiana Jones – and presses it lovingly into a fart joke book. Once Quill takes possession of the infinity stone, an ad-hoc gang comes together. There's Gamora (Saldana), a green-skinned professional assassin; the vengeful Drax the Destroyer (Bautista); Rocket Raccoon, a mutant and mercenary (voiced by Cooper); and Groot, a sweet-tempered, sentient tree (voiced by Diesel). Groot and Rocket were crafted from motion-capture CGI and spot-on voice-work, but they never feel unreal. Overall, the effects work is outstanding – not least of which is the use of painterly backdrops

Alamo Ritz, Alamo Lakeline, Alamo Slaughter Lane, Alamo Village, Barton Creek Square, CM Cedar Park, Hill Country Galleria, CM Round Rock, Southpark Meadows, CM Stone Hill Town Center, Flix Brewhouse, Highland, Gateway, iPic, Lakeline, Metropolitan, Moviehouse, Tinseltown North, Westgate

(one calls to mind an architect's rendering of midcentury Tomorrowland) – and the 3-D justifies itself with a stunning depth of field.

Guardians of the Galaxy is an outlier: a space opera in a largely earthbound movie cycle (excepting the occasional red-eye to another dimension in the Thor pictures), candy-colored and bopping where the other Marvel movies are muted and imposing, and the funniest one to date, without a doubt. James Gunn, who previously directed cult faves like Slither and Super (a noble failure) and co-wrote the script with Nicole Perlman, was an inspired choice to adapt these lesser-known misfits and comic-book characters for the screen. His pledge to irreverence and his uplift of the everyman (not superman) with an earnest drive to do the right thing is just the kind of goosing the increasingly wearying Marvel movies need. You can have the Avengers' supergroup of professional heroes and egos: I prefer the Guardians' garage band – rowdy and rough-edged and a real family.

★ CODE BLACK

Emergency medicine is a relatively young field, but its role in the American health care system – as the first line of last resort for our country's poor and uninsured – shows the specialty to be a victim of its own success. Hospital ERs and their waiting rooms are overwhelmed and overpopulated with patients who believe they have nowhere else to go. There's a failure in the system – in other words, a Code Black.

Ryan McGarry is an unusual hyphenate: a filmmaker/physician. McGarry shot Code Black over several years, while completing his residency at Los Angeles County General, a public hospital also known as County/USC. Here the system is so overloaded that it's not unusual to find patients sitting for 18-24 hours in the waiting room before ever being seen by a member of the medical staff. Code Black has points to make about the triumphs and inadequacies of America's health care system. (Any updates to reflect the present-day reality in the post-Affordable Care Act era would likely reveal little change.)

The finished documentary (which has won several festival awards) is remarkably vivid in capturing the sights and sounds of the ER. There's a wonder to the organized chaos of the treatment bays, where the sight of spurt-ing blood and guts mix with the din of stainless steel instruments, barked orders, and curdling shrieks of pain. Viewers will come away with a you-are-there perspective: It's not always pretty, but it's always amazing.

A great deal of the film captures County General's shift from its old ER theatre into a spiffy new building mandated by updated earthquake building codes. While in their original space, the doctors and patients were all crammed together in an area called C-Booth. Spoken of in reverential tones by the doctors who trained there, C-Booth also had the effect of cossetting the doctors from various rules and paperwork that just weren't feasible in that outdated location. Add to that the cowboy culture that's been endemic in this field of quick-fire medical practice, which only became a board-certified specialty around 1970, and you'll see some idealistic young residents complaining about the brutalizing amount of paperwork that's now required in the current age of HIPAA laws. Code Black indeed follows a half-dozen or so residents as they go through their paces and intercuts some of this footage with some after-hours gab that humanizes the steady erosion of ideals among a group as telegenic as any you might find on any hospital drama on TV.

For the most part, Code Black is a riveting document despite its tendency to jackrabbit around in its themes and personalities. Since being in the ER with a personal emergency is not an event you'd wish on anyone, watching this film allows us another kind of up-close access – through a protective layer of film, if you will.

THE FLUFFY MOVIE

D: Manny Rodriguez, Jay Lavender. (PG-13, 101 min.)

The Fluffy Movie is mostly a comedy performance film, although it has a narrative introduction in flashback that shows the meeting of Gabriel Iglesias' parents, as well as his birth and childhood. Interestingly, part of this flashback framing device (shot by Jay Lavender) has the very young Iglesias fooling his mom into allowing him to rent Eddie Murphy's Raw. When that film was released in 1987, comedy-performance theatrical features were rare, and acts usually used the opportunity to take a career-defining shot at going for the gold.

Now with cable specials, TV series, and animated films, a gifted comic like Iglesias works all the time. The Fluffy Movie is a record of Iglesias' current stand-up material, not designed to be his definitive comic work. Inherently funny, with a terrific sense of timing, an amazing gift for mimicry, and an ability to perfectly imitate all kinds of everyday sounds, Iglesias is always charming and frequently laugh-out-loud funny.

This one is a little odd in that it opens with the comic riffing on his relationship with Martin Moreno, his opening act whose set is not included in the movie. Still, the stories of their adventures work – especially an extended take on visiting India. Consistently funny, the film is rarely dazzling, being very workmanlike but still a job well-done by a gifted comedian.

Toward the end of the set, Iglesias amps it up several notches when he talks about finally encountering his own absentee father after more than 30 years of separation and interweaves it with stories about his own relationship with his son (who is adopted and whom he points out a couple of times too often). This extended bit gains some traction, transcending the routine-but-still-funny, standard stand-up fare delivered during the rest of the set. Iglesias' fans will love it.

GET ON UP

D: Tate Taylor; with Chadwick Boseman, Nelsan Ellis, Dan Aykroyd, Viola Davis, Octavia Spencer, Craig Robinson, Lennie James, Jill Scott, Josh Hopkins, Fred Melamed, Tika Sumpter, Allison Janney, John Benjamin Hickey, Jamarion Scott, Jordan Scott. (PG-13, 138 min.)

A reporter stands up from the crowd. Mousy, blond, achingly Caucasian, she asks James Brown (Boseman) point-blank: "What, exactly, is 'the groove'?" The flustered Godfather of Soul tries to explain that it's defined more by feeling than words, and as directed by Tate Taylor, Get on Up works best on the rare occasions when it shares that elusive charge of emotion rather than trying to pin down the man behind the music.

This being a biopic in the tradition of Ray and Walk the Line, we're treated to the usual highs and lows, exploring Brown's impoverished childhood in Georgia through a teenage jail sentence to the successful career rise and ensuing egomania. However, for better and worse, the story unfolds as the late Brown himself might have related it, scattered across time, told with more impulse than clarity.

For instance, the film is framed by a broadly funny late-in-life incident involving a shotgun-wielding Brown interrupting an insurance seminar in order to determine who last used his precious private commode. We then leap back to the rising star's Vietnam campaign, marred only by a mild case of anti-aircraft artillery, and then to his far more somber life as a boy (twins Jamarion and Jordan Scott), abused by his father (James) and abandoned by his mother (Davis).

From there, we proceed through Brown's life with its own subject addressing the viewer directly (echoes of Clint Eastwood's turgid Jersey Boys), and whenever it seems that he's getting something resembling the warts-and-all treatment (abuse of drugs and wives receive equally cursory mentions), Taylor retreats to Brown's mommy issues as an explanation for his behavior, if not an excuse.

Boseman's performance as Jackie Robinson in last year's 42 largely internalized that African-American icon's struggles, but given Brown's hard-working reputation and public persona, Boseman is burdened with a sense of lively imitation, nailing the voice when offstage, the moves when onstage, the sweat, the swagger. When Get on Up works, it shares Brown's flamboyant wavelength with energetic musical performances and show-business antics or by simply saying nothing at all (scenes in which young James removes the shoes from a lynching victim or receives a previously denied meal from a waitress at the sight of a record exec speak their own kind of volumes).

Unfortunately, that only goes so far toward combating either cliched scenes of success (honkies standing agape in the recording booth, Octavia Spencer's surrogate mama assuring a wide-eyed James that he's gonna be a great man one day) or strained instances of poetic license (when the older James ends a car chase, his younger self emerges from behind the wheel).

Get on Up isn't shy about Brown's eventual existence as a wife-beating showboat who shunned his closest friends (Nelsan Ellis delivers a quietly brittle turn as Bobby Byrd) and tested his loyal colleagues (Dan Aykroyd plays his beleaguered manager), but it practically induces whiplash when trying to forgive his flaws. "You look backward, you're dead," Brown warns his audience early on, and sure enough, whenever the narrative does just that, it threatens to lose its flicker of life.

HERCULES

D: Brett Ratner; with Dwayne Johnson, Rufus Sewell, John Hurt, Ian McShane, Peter Mullan, Reece Ritchie, Ingrid Bolsø Berdal, Rebecca Ferguson, Aksel Hennie, Joseph Fiennes, Joe Anderson, Tobias Santelmann. (PG-13, 98 min.)

A journeyman director at best, Brett Ratner has made thoroughly competent contributions to the genres of buddy comedy (the Rush Hour trilogy), Capra-corn (The Family Man), ensemble caper (Tower Heist), crime thriller (Red Dragon) and superhero sequel (X-Men: The Last Stand). With Hercules, he sets his sights on the historical epic, delivering a big-budget adventure indebted more to corrier sword-and-sandal movies of yesteryear than the exaggerated bloodshed and sepia-toned abs of 300 and its countless knock-offs (including January's crummy The Legend of Hercules).

Anyone expecting a Clash of the Titans-like fantasy, however, has the marketing to blame. The beastly money shots littered across trailers and TV spots are served up as a swift prologue to the actual story, in which the much-heralded Hercules (Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson) has welcomed the overblown retellings of his 12 labors. In truth, he is not a lone demigod, but a gold-seeking mercenary eagerly leading his team of archetypal sidekicks – the surly comrade (Sewell), the young hype-man (Ritchie), the tomboy archer (Berdal), the mute madman (Hennie), and the sarcastic seer (McShane) – into combat.

That notion of mythic deconstruction is the single most intriguing element of Ryan Condal and Evan Spiliotopoulos' comic-based screenplay, but the Liberty Valance "print the legend" angle is soon abandoned in favor of traditional derring-do, constant quips, and exotic locales, as Hercules and friends are enlisted by Lord Cotys (Hurt) to track down the rogue Rhesus (Santelmann). To that end, Ratner has fashioned an adequate action-adventure around Johnson's horse-heaving he-man, a hero who's still larger than life even after the legend has supposedly been stripped away, and until a digitally bombastic finale, the battles carry the welcome weight of actual stunt work while pushing the limits of the PG-13 rating with the detached limbs, heads, and so on.

If anything gets lost in the mayhem, it's Johnson's reliably charming personality. His Hercules is saddled with a predictably tragic past, and as a blunt force burdened with trauma, his natural charisma is consistently tempered by the material (still putting him leagues above Legend's buff-but-bland Kellan Lutz). Perhaps the star was looking to flex some less obvious muscles for a change, but his well-established appeal might have been strong enough to elevate this vehicle above the level of marginal matinee fare.

AMERICA: IMAGINE THE WORLD WITHOUT HER

D: Dinesh D’Souza, John Sullivan. (PG-13, 95 min.)

Essentially this “documentary” by noted right-wing pundit Dinesh D’Souza is review-proof. Its purpose is not to inform but rather to reinforce viewers’ existing prejudices. This is an unusually odious effort because it is so hugely hypocritical and self-serving. Presenting itself as a vigorous defense of America’s greatness, it targets the enemy as dissenting voices within the country, and, in doing so, attacks the very core constitutional vision of America as a melting pot of disparate ideologies. Rather than deal with the complexity of mainstream dissent and the country’s long history of charged political discussion, D’Souza sets it up as bad guys and good guys – just one example of the film’s brazen manipulation. Ignoring any arguments or logic, D’Souza paints himself as ennobled, even as he attacks the very dialogues that have and continue to make this country great. As for a star rating: your call, based on your political beliefs. (07/04/2014)

AND SO IT GOES

What’s up with Diane Keaton? An acquired taste, the 68-year-old actress toils mostly with thankless, seemingly interchangeable stock roles in glossy family dramas and romantic comedies – somehow managing to make these unremarkable characters vibrant, even though the quality of her films lately leaves much to be desired. Her recent track record doesn’t improve with the gooeys And So It Goes, which finds Keaton playing Leah, a widowed, wannabe lounge singer. Grumpy old man Michael Douglas’ Oren is the rude widower who lives next door, his uncomplicated life turned upside down when he must care for his estranged son’s daughter. There is a notable absence of directorial stewardship here. Certain scenes play as if Rob Reiner forgot to show up for filming, so the actors and cameraman just winged it. Perhaps his embarrassing turn as Leah’s clueless accompanist distracted him from his principal responsibilities behind the camera. What a Meathead. (07/25/2014)

BEGIN AGAIN

D: John Carney; with Keira Knightley, Mark Ruffalo, Hailee Steinfeld, Adam Levine, James Corden, Ceelo Green, Catherine Keener. (R, 104 min.)

For writer/director John Carney, at least one story is tried and true: A pair of unlikely partners are drawn together by the promise of making music. If his perfectly romantic Once was raw sugar, then Begin Again – which sees scorned songwriter Gretta (Knightley) and washed-up record company exec Dan (Ruffalo) reluctantly collaborating – is Splenda in comparison. Increasing the star power and moving from the streets of Dublin to New York City, the film also sees a proportional increase in agreeable phoniness. Gretta’s just left Dave (Levine, of Maroon 5). Dan has just lost his job at a Grammy-winning hip-hop label. In a last-ditch attempt to jump-start her musical career and rescue his, the pair decide to record an entire album live on the streets. It’s no Once, but there are enough lovely little moments and catchy ditties to effectively combat the convention which threatens to swallow the story whole. (07/04/2014)

D: Richard Linklater; with Ellar Coltrane, Patricia Arquette, Ethan Hawke, Lorelei Linklater. (R, 164 min.)
With his newest release Boyhood, Richard Linklater has created the ultimate coming-of-age film, a true masterwork that transcends the usual constructs of the genre and delves into the development of personhood as it is experienced – day by day, year in and year out. By the very nature of its approach – Boyhood was filmed a few days at a time over 12 years – the film allows us to witness time’s effects on the boy of the title, Mason Jr. (Coltrane), as well as his family: mother Olivia (Arquette), father Mason Sr. (Hawke), and older sister Samantha (Lorelei Linklater). From the get-go, we’re placed on a course to observe a child’s ongoing experience with making sense of the world he’s inherited. Boyhood’s originality clearly extends beyond the screen, and it’s this film – even more so than Slacker or the Before trilogy – that will earn Linklater a place in the history books. D: Matt Reeves; with Andy Serkis, Jason Clarke, Gary Oldman, Keri Russell, Toby Kebbell, Nick Thurston, Kodi Smit-McPhee, Kirk Acevedo, Terry Notary, Karin Konoval, Judy Greer. (PG-13, 130 min.)
Ten years after the ape-ocalypse witnessed in 2011’s Rise of the Planet of the Apes, we revisit these apes as they lay the groundwork for their new society among the California redwoods. Now fully bipedal, the apes live in Anasazi-like dwellings, where English-language skills and philosophical teachings (“Ape not kill ape”) are scratched onto the rock walls, under the leadership of Caesar (a combined marvel of computer imaging and motion-capture acting by Andy Serkis). With mankind decimated by a simian flu epidemic, a few inexplicably immune survivors – led by Malcolm (Clarke) and his wife Ellie (Russell) – are

The Foxy Merkins

★ The Foxy Merkins (2013) D: Madeleine Olnek; with Lisa Haas, Jackie Monahan, Alex Karpovsky. (NR, 90 min.) Cinema East. Margaret is a down-on-her-luck, lesbian hooker-in-training. She meets Jo, a beautiful, self-assured grifter from a wealthy family. The duo hit the streets, where they encounter bargain-hunting housewives, double-dealing conservative women, husky-voiced seductresses, and shopaholic swingers. @French Legation Museum, Sunday, 9pm.

deep in the apes' territory when a gun goes off, an ape dies, and rapprochement between the two species falls to Caesar and Malcolm. Director Matt Reeves (Cloverfield, Let Me In) – an expert at eking pathos from CGI – is perfect for this engaging story about the beasts that lie within. ★ EARTH TO ECHO

D: Dave Green; with Brian 'Astro' Bradley, Teo Halm, Reese Hartwig, Ella Wahlestedt, Jason Gray-Stanford. (PG, 91 min.) Stop me if you've heard this one before: A trio of suburban kids befriend an alien entity and must avoid parents and authorities alike in their mission to send it back home. Earth to Echo makes no secret of its foremost influence: E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial. Despite its oft-distracting, handheld shaky-cam aesthetic, Dave Green's first feature still makes for a brisk, appealing adventure, capably anchored by four young actors. On their last day together in their suburban Nevada hometown, our intrepid videographer Tuck (Bradley) and best friends Alex (Halm) and Munch (Hartwig) follow a mysterious beacon into the nearby desert to discover its sender, a wide-eyed robotic alien they decide to name Echo. Of course, they're not the only ones looking for him. Updating an old-fashioned journey with newfangled, digital distractions, Earth to Echo is a small-scale and squeaky-clean alternative to blockbuster bombast, about as unoriginal as it is fundamentally inoffensive. ★ THE FAULT IN OUR STARS

D: Josh Boone; with Shailene Woodley, Ansel Elgort, Laura Dern, Sam Trammell, Nat Wolff, Willem Dafoe. (PG-13, 125 min.) Yes, teenagers are prone to hyperbole, but when 16-year-old Hazel (Woodley) warns "I'm a grenade," she's not far off the mark. Diagnosed with Stage IV cancer in her early teens, she worries about her parents (Dern and Trammell), who will inevitably survive her, wearing the burden as heavily as the oxygen tank she must lug with her everywhere. Gus (Elgort), a cancer survivor and self-described 18-year-old virgin with only one leg, is more foolhardy, or maybe just seize-the-day sensible, doggedly ignoring Hazel's efforts to keep a safe distance. That they will fall in love is foregone, even for those who hadn't already gulped John Green's gorgeous source novel. After a slow, sweet build to an adventure in Amsterdam, the film dramatically plateaus, but not ruinously so. If you're looking for anthemic, The Fault in Our Stars falls short. But the film is bundled in kindness, and that's nothing to shrug at. (06/06/2014) ★★★★★ – Kimberley Jones Movies 8, Metropolitan, Lake Creek 7

🌀 HOW TO TRAIN YOUR DRAGON 2

D: Dean DeBlois; with the voices of Jay Baruchel, Cate Blanchett, Gerard Butler, Craig Ferguson, America Ferrera, Jonah Hill, Kristen Wiig, Djimon Hounsou, Kit Harrington. (PG, 102 min.) Distinguished by its quick wit, scenic vistas, and an admirable championing of a loner-nerd hero, the first How to Train Your Dragon was a startlement and a seduction. Sequels usually spell the blues, or the blahs, but this one defies expectations yet again, displaying gaspingly good 3-D animation, and a real depth of emotion, too. I laughed, I cried, I longed for a pet dragon of my own. The sequel carries over the leads from the original (and Cressida Cowell's source book series) – young Hiccup (Baruchel), a peacemonster stranded among a clan of spear-rattling Vikings, and his faithful dragon Toothless – and writer/director Dean DeBlois (Lilo & Stitch) knows he's got a good thing going with their dynamic. Toothless is so vividly, viscerally animated, I worry a child will look askance at her own humble dog and peevishly wonder why Fluffermutter can't fly, or at the very least breathe fire. I ORIGINS

D: Mike Cahill; with Michael Pitt, Brit Marling, Astrid Bergès-Frisbey, Steven Yeun, Archie Panjabi, Cara Seymour, Kishish. (R, 107 min.) Writer/director Mike Cahill's follow-up to 2011's Another Earth grapples with the same themes and pseudoscientific inquiries – the rift between the empirical and spiritual worlds – yet I Origins is more plausible and convincing than its predecessor. Michael Pitt is cast against type as Dr. Ian Gray, a molecular biologist researching the human eye – an obsession which leads him to Sofi (Bergès-Frisbey) at a NYC costume party. Meanwhile, back at the lab, Ian's assistant Karen (Marling) is forging ahead with some breakthrough experiments. Then, sudden tragedy strikes and the film cuts ahead seven years. Now a father and husband, Ian must grapple again with old dichotomies between heart and mind. Cahill's brand of humanist science fiction is destined to appeal most to like-minded souls. Empiricists only need apply if they have a thing for lovely gamines who speak in foreign-accented English, as well as a tolerance for blatantly metaphorical film titles. KICK

D: Sajid Nadiadwala; with Salman Khan, Jacqueline Fernandez, Randeep Hooda, Nawazuddin Siddiqui. (NR, 146 min., subtitled) In this Hindi film, a couple who are about to marry reveal their secrets, but little do they know that a certain thief is the starring character in both of their sagas. Saturn 3

★ Saturn 3 (1980) D: Stanley Donen; with Kirk Douglas, Farrah Fawcett, Harvey Keitel. (R, 88 min.) Austin Public Library: Bad Film Festival. Two alternative-food researchers stationed in the rings off Saturn work in romantic and professional bliss until their perfect lives are disrupted by the intrusion of a captain and his lusty robot. With a script by Martin Amis(!), this is B-movie goodness. @Carver Branch Library, Monday, 6:30pm.

Twin Peaks: Fire Walk With Me

★ Twin Peaks: Fire Walk With Me (1992) D: David Lynch. (R, 135 min.) The Complete David Lynch. Lynch alienated more than a few fans with this savage prequel (and epilogue) that brings Laura Palmer's sordid, tragic life and mysterious death from TV to the screen. (*) @Alamo Ritz, Wednesday, 7pm; Thursday (8/7), 3:30pm.

★ LUCY

D: Luc Besson; with Scarlett Johansson, Morgan Freeman, Choi Min-sik, Amr Waked. (R, 88 min.) Luc Besson's best films – taut, cinematically explosive, skillfully plotted, fantastic narratives – are among my all-time favorites. But when was his last great film as a director: The Fifth Element in 1997? Lucy is a glorious mess, a film that casually wanders through a variety of genres. Which is fine, if only because it is so deliriously anchored by Scarlett Johansson's performance. Set up by her boyfriend, Lucy (Johansson) becomes an unwilling drug mule when a dangerous Asian cartel surgically inserts a stash of a new, secret superdrug into her body. But the packets of drugs soon burst, and almost immediately Lucy begins to evolve into a human being who can exercise 100% of her intelligence. Far-fetched but riveting, and a daring, giddy joy ride of an adventure, Lucy races along, leaving behind a swirlingly confused trail as it tracks a single intelligence that's rapidly evolving from human to universal. ★ A MOST WANTED MAN

D: Anton Corbijn; with Philip Seymour Hoffman, Rachel McAdams, Grigoriy Dobrygin, Robin Wright, Willem Dafoe, Daniel Brühl, Homayoun Ershadi, Nina Hoss, Franz Hartwig. (R, 121 min.) A post-9/11 espionage thriller adapted from John Le Carré's 2008 novel, A Most Wanted Man opens in Hamburg, Germany, a port city on high alert after Mohamed Atta and his co-conspirators plotted the September 11th attacks there. In the film's first minutes, a Chechen/Russian dual citizen named Issa (Dobrygin) is absorbed into Hamburg's Muslim community, setting off alarms for an off-the-books team of spies, led by Günther Bachmann (Hoffman, in one of his last performances). Issa is the central daub of paint in a pointillist portrait of predators and prey: Take 10 steps back, cock your head to the left, and maaaaaaybe all the discrete strokes make sense in wide focus. Be they spies, bureaucrats, or Islamic extremists, everybody has a place in the pecking order, but director Anton Corbijn (Control, The American), playing it close to the chest, intentionally obscures precisely who's predator and who's prey. Forget it: Everybody's chum here. (07/25/2014) ★★★★★ – Kimberley Jones Hill Country Galleria, Tinseltown North, Violet Crown

PLANES: FIRE & RESCUE

finds the race-winning plane Dusty learning that his gearbox is permanently damaged and irreplaceable. No longer able to race, Dusty joins a fire-and-rescue team, where he must learn to work in a group and be less of a showboat. Often breathtakingly beautiful, as well as wittily written to entertain both children and adults, Planes: Fire & Rescue still falls flat. The astonishing feats of aerial maneuvering and sumptuously rich depictions of burning forests can be visually pleasurable and cinematically impressive, but Planes: Fire & Rescue is just too mundane, its narrative never able to expand beyond the art. Obviously, an enormous amount of effort was invested in this project. Unfortunately, those good intentions resulted in the creation of a largely unimaginative, if still mildly entertaining, work. ★ THE PURGE: ANARCHY

D: James DeMonaco; with Frank Grillo, Carmen Ejogo, Zoë Soul, Zach Gilford, Kiele Sanchez, Michael K. Williams, Edwin Hodge, Keith Stanfield. (R, 104 min.) The inevitable sequel to last summer's The Purge, which struck an unlikely chord with its outlandish yet provocative premise – supposing a near-future in which social order is maintained by way of an annual lawless free-for-all – The Purge: Anarchy wisely broadens its focus to several sets of characters on the streets of Los Angeles. There's Shane (Gilford) and Liz (Sanchez), two dumb kids stranded by car trouble; Eva (Ejogo) and Cali (Soul), a mother and daughter whose plans to hunker down prove futile; and Sergeant (Grillo), a Punisher-like vigilante whose conscience ultimately gets the better of him. They reluctantly team up with one another in order to make it through the night. Returning writer/director DeMonaco brings a welcome sense of momentum to the film, which doubles as its own best metaphor by inviting audiences to cheer on its annual dose of bloodshed as much as question its moral value. RIO 2

D: Carlos Saldanha; with the voices of Jake T. Austin, Kristin Chenoweth, Jesse Eisenberg, Anne Hathaway, Andy Garcia, Bruno Mars, Jemaine Clement, Jamie Foxx, Will.i.am, George Lopez. (G, 101 min.) In this animated sequel, Blu (Eisenberg), Jewel (Hathaway), and their three children head from their home in Rio deep into the Amazon basin, where they find a whole flock of blue macaws that turn out to be Jewel's long-lost family. Jewel, meeting both her father (Garcia) and an old love (Mars), is delighted to be with them in the jungle, but Blu is a city bird, uncomfortable with the father-in-law and unhappy about the ex. Rio 2 is loaded with terrific vocal talents (though they are mostly squandered), and is agog with characters all feverishly working to carry way too much plot. Less a celebration of Brazil than of homogenized Las Vegas stage-show aesthetics, the film's more ethnic elements are Mixmaster-blended into seamless Hollywood entertainment. All singing, all dancing, all color: Rio 2 is a modern, studio animation blockbuster – spilling all over the place, rather than arching into the sky. (04/18/2014)

SEX TAPE

D: Jake Kasdan; with Cameron Diaz, Jason Segel, Rob Corrdry, Ellie Kemper, Rob Lowe, Nat Faxon. (R, 94 min.) Annie (Diaz) and Jay (Segel) are a married couple trying to rekindle the spark of romantic love in the bluntly titled Sex Tape. One drunken evening, they decide to make an epic, three-hour document of their carnal knowledge on Jay's iPad. No big deal, right? Not so fast! When Jay accidentally uploads the video to his "cloud," everyone – all of their friends and family, as well as Annie's potential new boss (Lowe), and even the mailman – has the sex tape. When it becomes apparent, through sinister anonymous texts, that the footage is being used as blackmail, an all-night odyssey of bumbling retrieval ensues. Sex Tape goes to great pains to establish its intention, but the film fails in the two main tenets it should be trafficking in: being funny and being raunchy. It's a bland, clawless comedy; a cautionary tale of a high concept gone horribly, horribly wrong. (07/25/2014)

An object of blunt force and breath-catching beauty, Snowpiercer plays what-if with a familiar doomsday scenario: What if Noah's ark never found dry land again? In this English-language debut from acclaimed South Korean filmmaker Bong Joon-ho (The Host, Mother), set in 2031 – some 17 years after a failed experiment to counteract global warming initiated a catastrophic Ice Age – humanity is now extinct, save the few thousand souls aboard the titular train, a fixed ecosystem powered by a perpetual-motion engine, which crosses the world on a continuous track. Primed for rebellion, the put-upon steerage class rallies around a reluctant leader named Curtis (Evans), in hopes of seizing the engine from the train's designer and godhead, Wilford. Single-purposed, but decidedly not single-minded, Snowpiercer is an unruly but rattling – and ravishing – work of art. (06/27/2014)

Ever since her coming-out party in 2011's Bridesmaids, Melissa McCarthy has basked in the benevolent glow of the people's goodwill. In short: Most of us dig her. What could possibly go wrong? She metaphorically cashed the blank check of her meteoric success to mount this modestly budgeted comedy with her husband, first-time director Ben Falcone. But what that unfettered creative control has wrought is ... not good. In fact, it's pretty awful. The misbegotten Tammy goes all in with its namesake character (McCarthy), who is irreversibly established as being thoughtless, unperceptive, and destructive. And the film's shift away from flat buffoonery isn't any more successful. At one point, Tammy has a make-over thrust upon her because this is a movie, and people in movies get makeovers. Even, apparently, when the filmmakers have carte blanche to be different, aim higher. But foreknowledge doesn't make the fact any less irritating. (07/04/2014)

“You can't keep spending money on junk to make new junk!” tanned teen Tessa (Peltz) pleads. Clearly, she doesn't realize she's in Michael Bay's Transformers: Age of Extinction, his fourth and longest yet effort to sell shiny, shape-shifting toys to little kids and flashy cars to big ones. Taking place five years after the Battle of Chicago, Age does away with screaming Shia LaBeouf and his dopey parents, focusing instead on struggling small-town inventor Cade Yeager (Wahlberg), who has unwittingly revived Autobot leader Optimus Prime. Harboring this otherworldly fugitive puts Cade, Tessa, and secret boyfriend Shane (Reynor) right in the thick of danger – especially with CIA stooge Harold Attinger (Grammar) working in league with intergalactic bounty hunter Lockdown and biotech giant Joshua Joyce (Tucci) to eliminate all Autobots and Decepticons alike. So long as Bay keeps throwing this junk in our faces, people will keep throwing their money right back. (07/04/2014)

WISH I WAS HERE

A decade's gone by now since Garden State – Braff's of-the-moment picture of generational anomie and mid-Aughties, mass-appeal indie film mores – and things change. Has Zach Braff? Much as his directorial debut took the temperature of a certain kind of twentysomething circa 2004, Wish I Was Here clearly wants to impart something just as thumping about what late-30s life is like, troubled by unruly kids, ailing parents, and creative aspirations complicated by financial realities. Braff has an ever-clever eye for observational humor, but too often the film feels reverse-engineered to manufacture would-be iconic imagery. Wish I Was Here has its moments of transcendence: The young actress Joey King, who plays Braff's daughter, and Mandy Patinkin, as his cancer-riddled, Orthodox Jewish dad, are particularly touching in their sincere wrangling with spirituality. Still, everything else in this everything-and-the-kitchen-sink film feels like too many ideas stored up over an especially long winter. (07/25/2014)

Ray LaMontagne

On Supernova, his fifth album, Ray LaMontagne abandoned his rootsier side in favor of full-fledged psychedelic nostalgia.

"I think there were songs on the second and third records that all would have fit very nicely on [Supernova]," he contends. "These were the melodies that were pulling at me, but I think there's been little hints of those musical influences on my other records as well."

With production by the Black Keys' Dan Auerbach, who LaMontagne says he's wanted to work with for years, the rock hints the folksinger's thrown out over the years were finally realized. Auerbach wasn't the only superstar that had a hand in the album, either.

"Elvis [Costello] is the one guy I know who's really been through it, who's had a long career and been through all of the ups and downs," reveals LaMontagne. "He's also just a really generous and gracious human being. I'd hit this point where I was getting a lot of melody and song ideas, but it didn't feel right. I wasn't sure why it was happening."

Costello's insight?

"It's kind of personal, but essentially that I should just trust myself. So I just kind of waited. I trusted in that creative voice."

Nick Waterhouse

Among the crop of new performers taking cues from Fifties/Sixties R&B, Nick Waterhouse also rocks – hard. Second effort Holly combines his songs into a novella of sorts starring the underbelly of Los Angeles, where he lives.

"I initially had the idea to make it into a bunch of short stories," he claims. "Like little vignettes. I thought about writing it out, but you start to make a record and get so involved with trying to be a musician that it's hard to find the time to do that sort of thing."

With Sharon Jones, JD McPherson, and Vintage Trouble mining similar musical territory, the late-twentysomething rides a fresh wave of retro soul beyond pumping up his sound with horns and backup singers. He admits to influences Aretha Franklin, John Lee Hooker, and Van Morrison, so it's no surprise Waterhouse admires jazz/blues master Allison, who he covers on Holly.

"When I was 13 or 14, I read Pete Townshend talking about Mose Allison," he recalls. "So I thought I should check that guy out. When I did, I was floored beyond any way that I ever was by any musician. Thanks Pete!"

— Jim Caligiuri

Parish, Friday 1

Black Label Society

Black Label Society doesn't tour. L.A.'s fearsome foursome invades. Leading the charge, Zakk Wylde, guitarist/growler for the Sabbath-invoking bluesy grinders.

"Everyone knows why they're here. We're like a bunch of Navy SEALs. We're gonna get together, we're gonna kill some guys, we're gonna go home."

Wielding new full-length Catacombs of the Black Vatican, the five-years-sober Wylde may be metal's most likable guy, proudly still on good terms with every musician to don the BLS colors. He's gregarious to boot. Onstage, however, he ain't talking. At a Black Label mass, it's song, reload, repeat.

"I don't want to be in the middle of Rambo and Sylvester fucking Stallone is giving a public service announcement. You listen to the radio, there's 15 seconds of dead air, and that guy's fired. Fifteen seconds sound like 15 hours. And unless you're David Lee Roth and you can crack jokes and that's part of the shtick, or you're Ozzy and you're working the crowd, I really don't give a fuck what you have to say.

"Just play the fucking music. Just keep killing the fucking bad guys."

MICKY & THE MOTORCARS CD RELEASE

Saxon Pub, Friday 1

Returning with a seventh full-length, Micky & the Motorcars follow up the driving Americana of 2011's Raise My Glass with more red-dirt-coated roots rock and highway ballads on Hearts From Above. Braun brothers Micky and Gary have since solidified the local quintet, their latest effort getting an assist from Reckless Kelly sibling Willy on production. Denny Freeman sets 'em up early with a sizzling, six-string happy hour, while Randy Rogers Band sideman Johnny Chops caps the night with his band the Razors. — Doug Freeman

BLUES BOY HUBBARD Skylark Lounge, Saturday 2

Schooled in juke joints anchoring the 11th Street corridor of Fifties East Austin, Henry "Blues Boy" Hubbard has found a new home seeping slow blues into the Skylark Lounge. The unassuming venue, nestled into a rundown parking lot on Airport Boulevard, feels like a step back in time, with low lighting, set-up service, and a row of rustic booths to nestle up against. Blues Boy and his Eastside Kings set the soundtrack at 10pm, just after gospel soul queen Margaret Wright handles happy hour. — Chase Hoffberger

MICHAEL BUBLÉ

Frank Erwin Center, Sunday 3

Michael Bublé pushes on in promoting April 2013's To Be Loved, mourning his beloved Italian grandmother who died last week. Pop's nicest Canadian spins the collection of original numbers with an ambitious array of covers that sets off his powerful vocals, pulling from James Taylor, the Ronettes, and Van Morrison. Clad in a tux, this Frank Sinatra with a lisp promises a velvety vox of old-fashioned romance. — Nina Hernandez

MINIATURE TIGERS

Stubb's, Wednesday 6

Utilizing Weezer's Blue album as a model, Brooklyn indie pop fourpiece Miniature Tigers crafted a polished but no less angst-filled album earlier this year, Cruel Runnings. Despite drawing on their alt-rock godfathers, the disc is a far cry from 2008 debut Tell It to the Volcano, which held closer to the Nineties indie template. They're joined by Aussie electro poppers the Griswolds and up-and-coming Cali rockers Finish Ticket. — Nina Hernandez

WHAT MADE MILWAUKEE FAMOUS, A. SINCLAIR Continental Club, Thursday 7

Rounding out a tour of the South, two Austin staples get a welcome home at the Continental Club. Supporting last year's comeback You Can't Fall off the Floor, What Made Milwaukee Famous blasts through unabashed pop, made more polished by their third act. Aaron Sinclair, tepidly emerging from under his moniker Frank Smith, which most recently yielded Nineties alt-rock, leaned into his solo persona with the infectious Pretty Girls EP. — Abby Johnston

MUSICIANS

Episcopal Church seeks Worship Leader
Grace Episcopal in Georgetown is seeking a pianist/worship leader for our 9:30 AM service at our second campus by Sun City. If possible, at an increased rate, we'd like the same person to lead our 5:00 PM service at the main campus on "Saturdays". The successful applicant will be proficient on the piano (organ skills would be considered a plus, but by no means required), have significant repertoire to offer as preludes, offertories, and postludes as well as be able to improvise during the liturgical actions. We use the Hymnal 1982 along with the Renew Hymnal. Outside musical selections are acceptable pending approval by the priest. Stipend is open to negotiation but will include Christmas Eve service at 5pm. Applicants with knowledge of Episcopal/Anglican liturgy preferred, but it isn't mandatory.

For further information or to schedule an audition please contact Father Trey Garland. (512) 863-2068
rector@graceepis.org

Female Vocalist Wanted

Well-financed, professionally-managed start up cover band playing a wide variety of material seeks young, professional, outgoing, female vocalist to sing lead. Ability to harmonize a huge plus. The LUV DOC

"Girl farts!"

Her farts are not that smelly, it's just that she doesn't even try to hold them in around me. She thinks it's funny when she farts. It was at first, but she does it all the time now, and she won't quit. She says if I love her I have to love her farts. I don't think that's true. What do you think? Should I draw a line?

— Gassed

First of all, Gassed, I want to apologize for not getting around to your question until now. I was busy washing my hair ... or whatever. For all I know you may be dead by now. If so, my bad. I may have underestimated the direness of your situation. A lot of people think farts are hilarious. Not so. Why? Because people need oxygen to laugh. Farts contain less than 10% oxygen. The other 90% is both highly flammable and/or highly odorous — in other words, hard to love. Of course, that could be said about a lot of things. Imagine if 90% of the smokestack emissions from ... say ... Dell Computers were both noxious and flammable. Austin would be at their gates with pitchforks and torches (careful with those torches) demanding that they relocate to Houston — or at the very least, Pasadena. You could ask your girlfriend to relocate to Pasadena, but before you do, let me throw a few stones at your glass house. Let's start by acknowledging that everybody farts. Some of us are just sneakier at it than others. My guess is that you grew up in a more repressive environment than your girlfriend. Maybe you were an altar boy who had to keep your sphincter clenched through an entire Latin mass. Maybe she grew up in a clothing-optional hippie commune where they had rice and beans for dinner every night and a ritual digestif of ecstatic flatulence. You can probably slip in a silent-but-deadly in the middle of a board meeting without breaking character while she carpet bombs the whole cube farm on the way to make her herbal tea in the break room. It's all good, bro.

You probably complement each other. Maybe, after a few years of your scorn and derision, she will tighten up a bit, but don't count on it. She knows the secret. You can hold it in all you want, but it's eventually going to come out. Maybe you should learn how to laugh at these intermittent odorous reminders of your mortality. If you can't do that, there's always Beano.

MR. SMARTY PANTS KNOWS

As the odd person out during someone else's date, we say we are the third wheel. In China, they say that they are the big, fat lightbulb.

Chlorophyll Kid, a superhero in the DC Universe, had the super-power to make plants grow faster. He was rejected for membership in the Legion of Super-Heroes.

Fizz will leak out of a plastic bottle of Coke faster than it will from a can. Even in the new polyethylene terephthalate (PET) plastic, over 12 weeks of storage in poor conditions — a hot place with direct sunlight — soda can lose up to 15% of its carbon dioxide.

During World War II, Nazi officers in occupied Czechoslovakia were banned from driving the speedy rear-engined Tatra because so many had been killed behind the wheel.

The Greeks used the term "idiot" to mean those who remain aloof from civic duty — they were regarded by the Greeks with disdain.

At left is information that Mr. Smarty Pants read in a book, a magazine, or the newspaper; heard on the radio; saw on television; or overheard at a party. Got facts? Write to Mr. Smarty Pants at the Chronicle, or email mrpants@austinchronicle.com.

FELINA

Felina is a very sweet pup who just loves to fetch tennis balls. She is very people oriented and just loves getting attention. She is having a hard time
adjusting to living in a shelter since she has been in a home her entire life. We would love to get this sweet girl placed back into a home and with a loving family that she deserves.

FREE WILL ASTROLOGY

by Rob Breznsy for August 1-7

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The Earth has been around for almost 4.6 billion years. But according to scientists who study the fossil records, fire didn't make its first appearance on our planet until 470 million years ago. Only then were there enough land-based plants and oxygen to allow the possibility of fires arising naturally. Do the math and you will see that for 90% of the Earth's history, fire was absent. In evolutionary terms, it's a newcomer. As I study your astrological omens for the next 10 months, I foresee the arrival of an almost equally monumental addition to your life, Leo. You can't imagine what it is yet, but by this time next year, you won't fathom how you could have lived without it for so long.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): In the nights to come, I expect you will dream of creatures like fiery monsters, robot warriors, extraterrestrial ghosts, and zombie vampires. But here's the weird twist: They will be your helpers and friends. They will protect you and fight on your behalf as you defeat your real enemies, who are smiling pretenders wearing white hats. Dreams like this will prepare you well for events in your waking life, where you will get the chance to gain an advantage over fake "nice guys" who have hurt you or thwarted you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's fine if you want to turn the volume all the way up on your charisma and socialize like a party animal. I won't protest if you gleefully blend business and pleasure as you nurture your web of human connections. But I hope you will also find time to commune with the earth and sky and rivers and winds. Why? You are scheduled to take a big, fun spiritual test in the not-too-distant future. An excellent way to prepare for this rite of passage will be to deepen your relationship with Mother Nature.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are hereby excused from doing household chores and busywork, Scorpio. Feel free to cancel boring appointments. Avoid tasks that are not sufficiently epic, majestic, and fantastic to engage your heroic imagination. As I see it, this is your time to think really big. You have cosmic authorization to give your full intensity to exploring the amazing maze where the treasure is hidden. I urge you to pay attention to your dreams for clues. I encourage you to ignore all fears except the one that evokes your most brilliant courage. Abandon all trivial worries, you curious warrior, as you go in quest of your equivalent of the Holy Grail.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Broadway is one of New York City's main streets. It runs the length of the island of Manhattan. But hundreds of years ago it was known by the indigenous Lenape people as the Wickquasgeck Trail. It was a passageway that cut through stands of chestnut, poplar, and pine trees. Strawberries grew wild in fields along the route. Is there a metaphorical equivalent in your own life, Sagittarius? I think there is: a modest, natural path that you will ultimately build into a major thoroughfare buzzing with activity. Part of you will feel sad at the loss of innocence that results. But mostly you'll be proud of the visionary strength you will have summoned to create such an important conduit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The heavenly body known as 1986 DA is a near-Earth asteroid that's 1.4 miles in diameter. It's packed with 10,000 tons of gold and 100,000 tons of platinum, meaning it's worth over 5 trillion dollars. Can we humans get to it and mine its riches? Not yet. That project is beyond our current technology. But one day, I'm sure we will find a way. I'm thinking there's a smaller-scale version of this scenario in your life, Capricorn. You know about or will soon find out about a source of wealth that's beyond your grasp. But I'm betting that in the next 10 months you will figure out a way to tap into it and begin the process.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): "I just sort of drifted into it." According to author Gore Vidal, "That's almost always the explanation for everything." But I hope this won't be true for you anytime soon, Aquarius. You can't afford to be unconscious or lazy or careless about what you're getting yourself into. You must formulate a clear, strong intention, and stick to it. I don't mean that you should be overly cautious or ultra-skeptical. To make the correct decisions, all you have to do is be wide awake and stay in intimate touch with what's best for you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Members of the industrial band Skinny Puppy are upset with the U.S. military. They discovered that an interrogation team at America's Guantanamo Bay detention camp tortured prisoners by playing their music at deafening volumes for extended periods. That's why they sent an invoice to the Defense Department for $666,000, and are threatening to sue. Now would be a good time for you to take comparable action, Pisces. Are others distorting your creations or misrepresenting your meaning? Could your reputation benefit from repair? Is there anything you can do to correct people's misunderstandings about who you are and what you stand for?

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If a farmer plants the same crop in the same field year after year, the earth's nutrients get exhausted. For instance, lettuce sucks up a lot of nitrogen. It's better to plant beans or peas in that location the next season, since they add nitrogen back into the soil. Meanwhile, lettuce will do well in the field where the beans or peas grew last time. This strategy is called crop rotation. I nominate it as your operative metaphor for the next 10 months, Aries. Your creative output will be abundant if you keep sowing each new "crop" in a fertile situation where it is most likely to thrive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Maybe your grandparents are dead, or maybe they're still alive. Whatever the case may be, do you have a meaningful or interesting connection with them? Is there anything about their souls or destinies that inspires you as you face your own challenges? Or is your link with them based more on sentimentality and nostalgia? In the near future, I urge you to dig deeper in search of the power they might have to offer you. Proceed on the hypothesis that you have not yet deciphered some of the useful messages you can derive from how they lived their lives. Explore the possibility that their mysteries are relevant to yours.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The prolific American author James Fenimore Cooper (1789-1851) wrote 32 novels. In those pages, he crammed in almost 1,100 quotations from Shakespeare. What motivated such extreme homage? I suspect he regarded Shakespeare as a mentor, and wanted to blend the Bard's intelligence with his own. I invite you to do something similar, Gemini. What heroes have moved you the most? What teachers have stirred you the deepest? It's a perfect time to pay tribute in a way that feels self-empowering. I suspect you will benefit from revivifying their influence on you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Was there an actual poet named Homer who wrote the ancient Greek epics the Iliad and the Odyssey? Or was "Homer" a fictitious name given to several authors who created those two master works? Whatever the case may be, we know that Homer plagiarized himself. The opening line of Book XI in the Iliad is identical to the opening line of Book V in the Odyssey: "Now Dawn arose from her couch beside the lordly Tithonos, to bear light to the immortals and to mortal men." So should we be critical of Homer? Nah. Nor will I hold it against you if, in the coming days, you imitate some fine action or brilliant move you did in the past. It was great the first time. I'm sure it will be nearly as great this time, but in a different way.

STATE OF WASHINGTON IN THE COUNTY OF KING
IN THE MATTER OF THE ADOPTION OF UNBORN IN-FANT WENDT, a person under the age of eighteen.
NO. 14-5-00662-5 SEA
SUMMONS AND NOTICE
OF PETITION/HEARING RE
RELINQUISHMENT OF CHILD/TERMINATION OF PARENT-CHILD RELATIONSHIP TO: ANDREW D. MCQUILKIN, JOHN DOE (UNKNOWN) AND TO ANY OTHER INTERESTED PARTY

You are hereby summoned to appear within thirty days after the date of first publication of this summons, to-wit, within thirty days after the 25th day of July, 2014 and defend the above-entitled action in the above-entitled court, and answer the petition of the Petitioner, BETHANY CHRIS-TIAN SERVICES, and serve a copy of your answer upon the undersigned attorneys for Petitioner, BETHANY CHRIS-TIAN SERVICES, at the office below stated; if you fail to do so, judgment may be rendered against you according to the request of the petition which has been filed with the Clerk of said Court.

YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED that a petition has been filed in this court praying that the parent-child relationship between parents of the above-named child and the above-named child be terminated. The object of the action is to seek an order relinquishing the child to the Petitioner for adoption and to terminate the parent-child relationship. The child was conceived in September 2013 in Olympia, Washington and is expected to be born on August 5, 2014. The child's birth mother is Dusty Wendt.

The court hearing on this matter shall be on the 27th day of August, 2014 at 9:00 a.m. in the King County Superior Court,; address: King County Courthouse, Ex Parte Department, Court Room W-325, 516 Third Avenue, Seattle, Washington 98104.

YOUR FAILURE TO APPEAR AT THIS HEARING MAY RE-SULT IN A DEFAULT ORDER PERMANENTLY TERMINATING ALL OF YOUR RIGHTS TO THE

NOTICE: State and federal law provide protections to defendants who are on active duty in the military service, and to their dependents. Dependents of a service member are the service member's spouse, the service member's minor child, or an individual for whom the service member provided more than one-half of the individual's support for one hundred eighty days immediately preceding an application for relief. One protection provided is the protection against the entry of a default judgment in certain circumstances. This notice only pertains to a defendant who is a dependent of a member of the national guard or military reserve component under a call to active service for a period of more than thirty consecutive days. Other dependents in military service also have protections against default judgments not covered by this notice. If you are the dependent of a member of the national guard or a military reserve component under a call to active service for a period of more than thirty consecutive days,

you should notify the plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney in writing of your status as such within twenty days of the receipt of this notice. If you fail to do so, then a court or an administrative tribunal may presume that you are not a dependent of an active duty member of the national guard or reserves, and proceed with the entry of an order of default and/or a default judgment without further proof of your status. Your response to the plaintiff or plaintiff's attorney's about your status does not constitute an appearance for jurisdictional purposes in any pending litigation nor a waiver of your rights.

You are further notified that any non-consenting parent or alleged father has a right to be represented by an attorney, and an attorney will be appointed for an indigent parent who requests an attorney. You are further notified that your failure to file a claim of paternity under Chapter 26.26 RCW within thirty days of the first publication of this notice or to respond to the petition within thirty days of the first publication of this notice is grounds to terminate your parent-child relationship with respect to the child.
You are further notified that your failure to respond to the termination action within twenty days of service, if served within the state of Washington, or thirty days if served outside of this state, will result in the termination of the parent-child with respect to the child.

You are further notified that if you are the alleged father of an Indian child, and your acknowledge paternity of the child, or if your paternity of the child is established prior to the termination of the parent-child relationship, your parental rights may not be terminated unless you: (i) give valid consent to termination, or (ii) your parent-child relationship is terminated involuntarily pursuant to 26.33 or 13.34 RCW. One method of filing your response and serving a copy on the Petitioner is to send them your written response by certified mail with return receipt requested.

WITNESS the Honorable
CARLOS Y. VELATEGUI, Judge/
Court Commissioner of said Superior Court and the seal of said Court hereunto affixed this 16th day of July, 2014.
